Memories in the Making

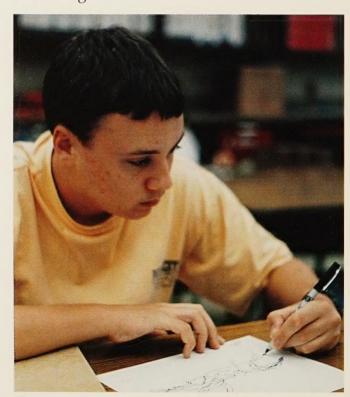

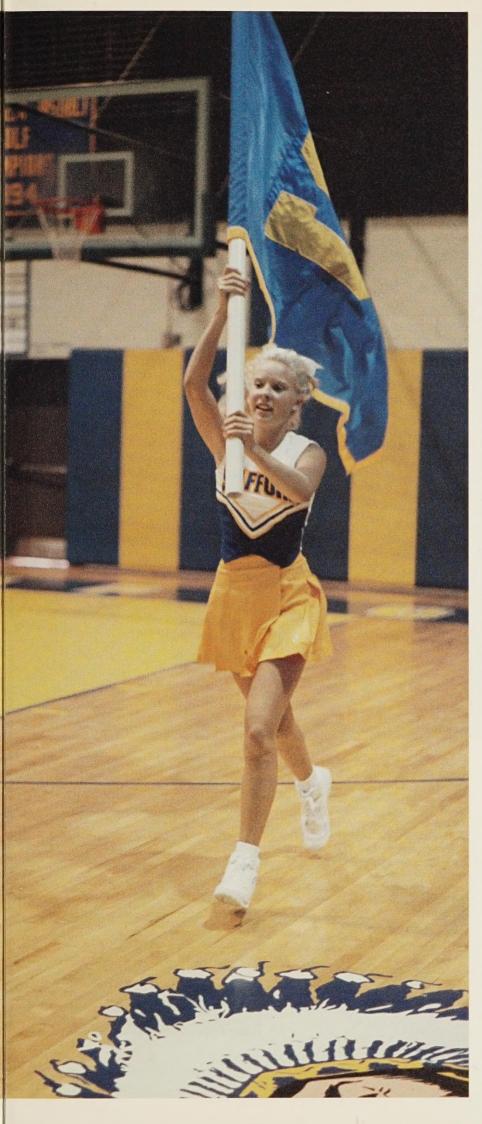

Just Sign On The Dotted Line... Firmly gripping the pen, Kim Murphy signs a form that allows her to get a parking permit. Parking permits were privileges of juniors and seniors which allowed them to park in the school parking lot. Some juniors arrived as early as 6 AM to snatch up the permits left after the seniors had gotten first priority. Photo by Mark Hughes.

What A Masterpiece Working hard on an art project, Tommy Wilson uses the contour line technique he learned in class. Art was often based on trial and error, with students experimenting with different methods to see which suited them the best. The teachers tried to show students that there was more to art than just drawing and painting. Photo by Mark Hughes.

The thrill of scoring the winning goal in a championship game, the agony of grueling over the books, the sadness of saying good-bye to friends as you go your separate ways; sometimes life can pass by so quickly that it's hard to slow down and enjoy these moments. When looking back the memories tend to become a blur of laughs and tears. The good times that have passed aren't easily forgotten by those who experienced them. Senior Justin Sterne said, "No matter what road I should take or what places I should go I will know that these years were the best years of my life."

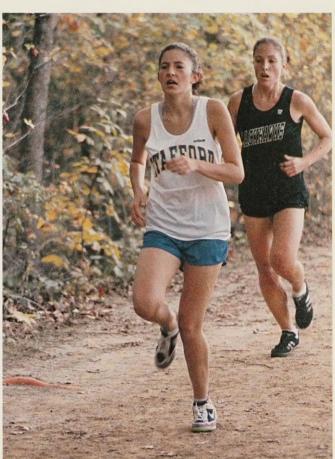

Seniors were often the most excited about the prospect of moving on with their life, whether it be to college or work. Yet they still wanted to be able to hang on to a piece of the past which would remind them of their times in high school. "I'm looking forward to leaving school so I can enter the work force as a car fuel intake specialist," joked Todd Coates. Jonathan Catalono said, "I may move on to college, but I hope I will never forget the friends I made here."

Everyone has a favorite memory from their high school career, be it good or bad. "My best memories were always with my sports and my teammates, who I love more than anything," said Elizabeth Campbell. Katie Jacoby also felt that sporting events made up some of her best memories when she said, "I'll never forget the Friday night football games. They were a great chance to hang out with all my friends and to just have a good time." But although the details of these events may have faded over time, the impact they made on our lives will remain forever. Story by Sara Philpott.

Year's End "I felt happy we were gonna be seniors,

Harboring into open house, smiles were plentiful as students greeted each other and their favorite teachers. Let Loose

Schoolwork, homework, sports &

extracurricular activities weigh students down for

180 days, then BOOM here comes summer,

& students find they have a lot of time on their hands to do what they enjoy most.

Sleeping in the sun, going on vacation, or just kicking back and relaxing are all a part of this long (or not so long) vacation known as summer. Whether students chose to go away, stay at home, or simply just sleep in, summer was always a well-awaited and anticipated break from the normal pressure of everyday school life. Melissa Rose put it simply when she said, "It was a great time to relax and not have to worry about waking up early to do work."

And there's always those incredible summer memories that seemed to linger on into the school year. "It was phat, I went to Georgia, met a lot of girls, and rode the Big Six of Six Flags," said Sammy Newsome about his summer-long visit to northern Georgia

While going away for the summer may be fun, many also enjoyed short frequent trips to various places. Such as Patti Hurlock who said, "I spent most of my summer at different beaches—which was cool because I got to meet a variety of people outside of Stafford." And even if they don't meet new people, nothing can replace the feel of the waves splashing on their feet and the sun beating down on their face.

Though many students didn't need to go to the beach to enjoy their vacation, some—like Jenny Witter—didn't even need to leave their house. "It was great just being able to watch all my favorite shows again."

Of course outdoor sports can also be enjoyed more in the warm summer weather. "It was great weather for golf," said Brett Lively. Most students seem to make the best of whatever comes out of their vacation. For summer was a time for students to spend on what they like doing best, whether it be sleeping, swimming, or even golf.

But like all good things, eventually, it must come to an end. For some, their summer days seemed to go on forever, but for many, it seemed to end too early. As Nadya Lieb said "It felt really short. It felt like we went to school, had about a week off, then came back again."

Yet sometimes even a week can help to calm the stresses of school. For whatever students do to pass the long summer days, summer seemed to counteract the hardships school brought. Even the smartest students needed time to allow them to focus on their other hobbies that were often times lost in the mad school rush. But no matter what they decided to do, summer was exactly what it was said to be... a vacation. Story Bu Nicole Brors.

long day of practice, the girls basketball team takes a time out to pose for a picture. Last summer, the team went to UNC to sharpen their skills. The girls got geared up for their long season.

That is what some Stafford students did when going to Spain. "The trip to Spain was an experience I won't forget," remarked Kim Murphy, just one of the students that went to Spain with Mrs. Shugart. More adventures were had in Paris as related by Sarah Jones. "I had a great time touring the wonderful sights of Paris. I think every kid should have the opportunity to travel overseas." Besides school trips, Rachel Jarnecke had the opportunity to go down under to Australia. "Australia was a beautiful place, and I will definitely be returning."

Although taking vacations and getting away from it all is fun and relaxing, some students were sweating the summer away in camps getting ready for the next year's athletics. "Basketball camp really brought the team together. Each member of the team learned a different skill to make us a winning team, "said Erika Havasy. Along with the basketball team, the cheerleaders worked on their skills at the University of Maryland, according to Kristi Dixon. "Despite our young squad, we pulled together and came out on top and blew everyone away with our awesome spirit."

Beat the Heat

Everyone shares the excitement of the sports seasons beginning, they look forward to the games and eering on their favorite sport.

However, unless you were one on those teams practicing during everyone else's summer break to prepare for those seasons to begin, you probably cannot even begin to understand the true excitement! "I hated getting up early, but I guess it was worth it, at least you got to see your friends over the summer," said Carly Renninger, who started her third year as an Indianette. The fall sports teams begin practicing during the summer break to make sure they are ready to play by the start

It was not always easy to get up early on a hot August morning to head to a practice, but it had its advantages. Amanda Evans, a varsity field hockey player, explained, "It's summer, all you really feel like doing is sleeping late, laying around the house, watching T.V., whatever, but usually you don't want to go practice. If you wanna be good, you get up and practice anyway!" The field hockey teams were one of the teams that often practiced twice a day to condition themselves for the coming season.

Aside from the work, there was also the factor of heat. "The heat about killed me and we ran constantly," said Andi Bordick, who played varsity tennis. Most people seem to agree that the running was not a favorite activity but it got you prepared for the season. Genny Rankin, who is a member of the varsity cheerleading squad said, "I hate running, especially when you're already tired, but the hard work brings your team together and in the end

In order to play, everyone has to practice, so our teams get up whether they like it or not, hopefully bringing about an exciting season in the fall. "It's rough getting outta bed, but you just deal with it, that's what you have to do if you want to play," said varsity football player, Josh Chamberlin. That was the bottom line. It may be summertime, but for the athletes at Stafford, wanting to play meant having to practice. Congratulations to you all, you made it through those August heat waves and the time came to play! Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz.

Hard Workin⁹

Part time it is were about the only way students could make a little money for the school year, college and bills such as car insurance. Student jobs ranged from places of like Southern Auto, True Value, Pizza Hut & Food Lion to places like northern Virginia government, Riverview Restaurant, Montgomery Ward & The Sports Authority.

Not everyone did it for the love of work, some students like Terrance Gallivan who explained, "I need the money for my car insurance!" worked to get the bills paid. Danielle King who lives in White Oak found a part time job at Pizza Hut and said, "If we aren't really busy then we are really slow which is boring

Of course there were the select few like senior William Keiner who said, "I love to drive and I get to deliver parts all day and when I'm not I just sit around." who like their jobs. places such as the mall and northern Virginia. Melissa Duer who worked in the Food Lion at Woodlawn exclaimed, "My job is close to home and I don't feel like driving all the way to the mall everyday.

For some students the choice between grades and money was a major factor as to why they did or did not get a job. As for students dividing their time between work and school Jonathan Catalano explained his philosophy on the matter: "I'm supposed to answer the phones but nobody ever calls so I sit and do my homework." New Faces

Mmm, the fresh smell of old textbooks, the BANGING of lockers, the Crowded hallways, yes, folks it was back to school time. School starting September 2nd may have been too early but once the first morning bell rung early, but once the first morning bell rung, the new school year began.

Some couldn't wait for school to start, so they could get a chance to see old friends and faces that they didn't get to see over the three and a half month break. Matt Matter summed it up best by saying, "Summer was fun, but I couldn't wait to get back to school and start on the book work." Eric Dowling agreed with Matt, "The summer was boring, I just hung out the whole time."

Others had a different view, like Katherine Fritter who said, "It's lousy, I'd just as soon stay home, it's hard to get into the swing of things." Elizabeth Sowers remarked, "I don't want to go back to school. My summer was a blast and September just ruins the mood of things."

For freshmen it was a new beginning, Josh Thompson said,

"I got lost at first, but I can find my way around, it's cool now."

Yet seniors are already anticipating the end of the year. Jill Strong was quoted as saying, "This being my senior year and all I just want to hurry up and get this year over with." Meleana Kala said, "I just hope these are the quickest nine months of my life."

Tasha Mickens summed it up best by saying, "It's very exciting to see people I didn't get a chance to see over the summer. This school year's gonna be the bomb!" Story by Oliver Goldman.

PEP RALLIES were a way for students to get to show their school spirit as they yelled and clapped for their class.

Catch This!

Throwing footballs into the stands, Kim Cooper, Christina Gates, and Jessie Cooley cheer at the pep rally. Snagging one of these footballs was quite an accomplishment with people falling all over each other in the bleachers to catch them. Photo by Liz Kravetz.

They also helped to rally up the support of the student body for the athletic teams. Students opinions about these events greatly varied. Becky Oliver said, "Pep rallies are a good way of promoting school spirit, but personally I'm not interested in sitting through them." Students who played sports were often more enthusiastic about the pep rallies. Darla Stevens felt "the best part about them is that now that we are seniors all the lower classmen have to stand for us when we come into the gym."

Students are not the only ones who get involved in the pep rallies. Several teachers each year participate in dances and cheers with the students as cheerleaders throw footballs into the stands. As soon as the cheerleaders pull out the footballs the mood becomes tense in the crowd as everyone struggles to catch one. "Personally, I can't see why everyone cares so much about getting a plastic football, but more power to them," said Al Philpott. The purpose of these events is to encourage school spirit and pride. Bredon Ahearn said, "Pep rallies are a way for me to feel comfortable with my own inner Indian spirit."

Whether students chose to opt out with an early out or to stay and show their school spirit, one thing that they all agreed was a positive thing, the shortened classes. Story by Sara Philpott.

SPIRIT WEEK pumped up the spirit with blue & gold day, hippie day, tie day, dress down day and twins day.

Trying out new themes for spirit week had more students participating in the festivities. "I think the topics were more accessible to shy students and fun, but not as creative as past years," commented Mr. Hughes. Students agreed that the topics could have been more "risky" and more of a shock.

Laura Crigler felt, "they used the same topics over and over again, I mean we brought hippies back so much that they're out again." However, she still found time to dress up for most of the spirit days. The cheerleaders as well as class officers showed a colorful array of spirit and creativity. Most enjoyed dressing up and having people comment on their garb, "I enjoyed all the comments I got on my twin outfit," said Jessye Cooley, who's twin was Kim Coo-

"Our goal was to try and add some spirit to the school," Matt Donaldson explained. The job is tough and hard to please everyone. An annoyed Adrienne Brown said, "I wish our class had more spirit like the Class of 98', they're so spirited and pepped." However, it was best put by Coleman Tyson, "You are only in high school once, it may be a rough road and one you don't care to take, but showing school pride makes the journey a little easier and a definitely more fun!" Homecoming— a time of stress and anticipation boiling up inside until that special night, when all of a sudden rags were transformed into gowns and boys were transformed into young gentlemen. "It was fun getting all dressed up and seeing other people all dresses up," said Jessica Moore.

For the most part, the homecoming dance went well. "Dinner was cool; the dance was cool; but waiting in line for pictures was horrible," said Sean Farmer. On the other hand, some students had small complaints, such as Carly Renninger who said, "They played a bunch of bad music... well, the slow music was good, but the fast music was all old stuff."

To reduce the pressure of the dance, some also found it more fun to just go with friends. Amy Parsons put it simply when she said, "Kristi Dixon and I had a lot of fun. I didn't have to worry about whether or not I looked good enough for a guy. It ended up being more fun than the rest of my years.

Besides the dance, the homecoming game also plays a big role in bringing on the homecoming spirit. "The homecoming game was fun, but it's too bad it had to be postponed until the next Monday," said Courtney Berry. Besides the usual Friday night game routine being broken, this year's float competition also had an unique outcome as put by Óliver Goldman "I was glad to see the tradition broken of the seniors always winning the float contest. The junior's float was really

Fabulous Fall

The return of school means not only a lot of changes for the students, but also a change in the weather.

It is the start of the fall sports seasons, which means afternoon field hockey games, Friday night football games, and ultimately a multitude of different activities including

HALLOWEEN

Fall at Stafford meant changes for everyone; it is not always easy to adjust to the change in routine. Scott Ferrebee contributed, "Fall is okay, except that it means going back to school, and getting back into the school routine."

Perhaps one of the most important events of Fall is the start of football season, and of course the weeks of waiting for Homecoming. "Since it was my freshmen year, I couldn't wait for Homecoming, especially because I hadn't been before," revealed Sarah Johnson. While Homecoming is one of the first big events of the year, it appeared as though not everyone was as excited about its arrival. "Once you've gone a couple times, its not that exciting, but it's still fun to get dressed up and go out," said senior Kim Cooper. Few people, however, can resist the temptation of Homecoming excitement as the night grows closer.

The fall weather is another highlight for some people. After three months of summer humidity and scorching sun, some people were ready for a little climate change. "Ilike when the weather starts getting colder; you get to wear new school clothes," joked Amber Sullivan. For some, the weather was just better for getting together and hanging out with friends. Senior Kristi Dixon commented, "I like fall cause its not really cold, but the weather's good for going out and doing stuff with friends". There were still some at Stafford who wanted to ban Fall altogether, "Fall just makes me think of school. I wish summer never ended," concluded Sabree Duff. Whether you love it or hate it, Fall is an important part of the year at Stafford, it's a time for football games, friends, and above all else, fun! Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz.

Winter Fun

The first flakes of snow brought the hope of snow days

What do you do on a snow day?

"I love sleeping in and enjoying a nice cup of hot chocolate to warm me up!" ~Cristi Cleaver

"I usually sleep in and then catch up on work or just lounge around the house and relax."

~Kim Murphy

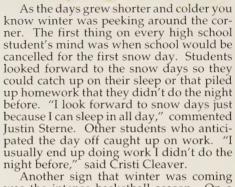

"Usually, I catch up on T.V. that I haven't watched and then go out with friends." ~Sarah Jones

"I hope that we won't have to go to school the next day."
~Erika Havasy

"I like going out and playing in the snow. Usually a group of us go out and play around. It gets your mind off everything." ~ Darla Stevens

Another sign that winter was coming was the intense basketball season. On a typical Friday night, most students gathered in the stands to cheer on their Stafford Indians. "I look forward to winter because basketball season starts," commented Erika Havasv.

Winter was a favorite season for most students. When winter was over, Spring fever would hit, and that would mean school would be letting out soon. Story by Amy Cooper.

Anything to Leave

Students journey all over the state on field trips

What was your favorite field trip and why?

"I don't know, I haven't been on that many, the Spanish trip in 11th grade was Fun, we got to eat at Planet Hollywood." ~ Renee Griffin

"It would definitely be the trip to Miami, that was definitely the most rewarding, there was a lot to do down there for colleges." ~Cramer Thompson

"Freshman year my English class went to see Romeo and Juliet, For English with Ms. Steele, that was pretty cool.' ~Nick Powers

"The Marine Biology Field trip this year was cool because we got to out on the boat. ~Karen Moore

"The Marine Science Field trip to the Baltimore Aquarium at the Baltimore inner harbor was cool because you had a lot of freedom and you got to walk around. ~ Jonathan Catalano

During the school year the students at Stafford went all over the place in order to enhance their learning experience; of course there was also the possibility this was just to have fun. The students went from Virginia Beach, Baltimore Inner Harbor, Washington D.C., and into wonderful historical Fredericksburg. Some of the field trips got students out of school for the whole day, whereas some of the field trips didn't get students out of school at all. Yet no matter where they went, what class they went with, or who was going with them, students all looked forward to the day when they could just kick back and relax as opposed to going to class.

One of the most awaited field trips of the year is the one planned by Mr. Roger Brown for his Marine Science classes. Students were at the school loading supplies on the bus around 5:15 am so they could leave by 5:45 a.m.. After a three hour drive to Virginia Beach the students took a three hour boat ride. Yes, the vomit flew over the rail of the boat, on the boat and even on some innocent by-standers as some students realized that life on the sea was not for them. Omri Nassau explained, "I wish I hadn't felt so crappy on the boat ride." Deidra Mullins apparently felt otherwise with her reply of, "It was alright, I got to catch up on some sleep!" Students gathered specimens for their tanks. Sam Newsome said, "It was cool. I caught a sting ray for my tank."

The learn and serve group at SHS took their field trip to Mary Washington Hospital. Liz Lewis said, "I had four dollars worth of food and Jay Schmitz had fifteen dollars worth, it was the grossest thing you have ever seen, he acted like he hadn't eaten in years, there was so much food!" Mr. Powell took his classes on a trip into Fredericksburg to view different areas of the city. The class left during first period and came back before the day was over. Junior Lisa Mendoza sarcastically said, "We went into Fredericksburg. It was a really BIG and LONG trip!" Mr. "G" Brown took his sociology class to the Bangkok Cafe in downtown Fredericksburg on an after school field trip. His only words of wisdom were, "When they put something on your table don't squish your face all up say EWWW GROSS!" His other advice was, "The desert they serve will make your tongue smack your brains out." Story by Sean L. Farmer.

Being a Senior

After four years, the class of 48 propares to graduate

What is your favorite part about being a senior?

"Waking up and realizing you're a senior. It's the best feeling in the world." ~Amy Spitler.

"Its Fun running into the underclassmen and knowing that they can't do anything. ~Beth MacDonald.

"Its great to know I can go on to a bigger and better life after this year." ~Bache Whitlock.

"Finally knowing all the rules and how to get around them." ~Andi Bordick.

"It feels fun. 1 like to bowl for Freshman in between periods." ~Allyn Hood.

"I'm ready to leave now!" shouts Chad Martin, on the first day of school. Many students have been preparing for this year for the last three years. Seniors have been known to rule the school with an iron fist and this year was no exception. Seniors often used their high status to get revenge upon the meek. Brian Cook had this to say, "I couldn't wait for this year. After being pushed in the hallways my first two years I can finally return the favor and push the freshmen into their lockers." To many seniors this school year was the longest ever. Jill Strong summed it up best by saying, "After four long years I'm ready to leave." Others were sad to leave, Amy Casico remarked, "It's sad being a senior, knowing that it's my last year of high school." Many seniors had mixed feelings. Johnathan Catalano was quoted as saying, "I'll miss going to Stafford, but it's cool knowing it's our last year here." Some even use the powers of being a senior towards their advantage. Crystal Carper said, "Its fun cutting in lines, even if some freshmen don't like it." Even though not everyone will admit it, the class of 1998 will surely miss Stafford and we will miss them. Story by Oliver Goldman.

How many Hours?

Students everk on their oven entriculum.

One-hundred and fifty hours, and that's just average, is the minimum requirement to complete an independent study. Just beginning to become known and excepted the focus room is booming with new

What is an independent study? "A way to incorporate something I enjoy into learning," Brendan Ahearn defined. This may sound fun and easy, however setting up your own schedule, learning format, and assignments can be difficult and challenging.

D.D. Bevan feels the course is, "rather interesting because you have to teach yourself and have your own schedule." The topics range from Japanese studies to independent publishing to pottery art to even river studies. The class becomes a nice break from the routine of "boring schoolwork" by allowing a student to learn information they enjoy and are interested in. Story by Andi Bordick.

For most school is just a beginning to the work day. Many students have little time for socializing and privacy, before they must run to work to make a pretty penny. From fellow Taco Bell workers the common phrase was, "everyone goes to Taco Bell," however, most wish they weren't there. Teachers alike went to another job or even more classes. Mr. Driver kept busy with a college class and on various nights another job.

class and on various nights another job.

Sports practices, and games and/or matches kept athletes physically and mentally drained. Ryan Clore stated, "After school hangouts... that would be football." Sports took up months of time and dedication, but in the end the reward of the team and season overtook the pressure.

Yet there were still students who found time for fun and games. Many guys such as Matthew Dursa, Coleman Tyson, and Alex Doyal enjoyed the cooling temperatures of the Rappahannock, but disliked the shivers and debris, common of the water.

"Just chillin'," was another familiar description of just being with friends and trying to stay out of trouble. When asked, Stephanie Murray put "life after school" just right, "I'm still trying to think of something." Story by Andi Bordick.

What next?

Making the Big Decision on the future.

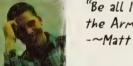

What do you plan to do once you get into college!

"Party." -Rodney Newton

"I definitely want to go into broadcast journalism." ~Missy Bushey

"Be all I can be in the Army. -~Matt Thompson

"Probably some kind of business, but it is to early to tell." ~Melissa Pimberton

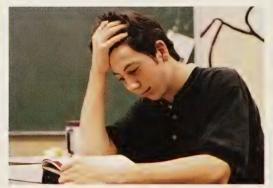

"Hopefully, Veterinarian School. ~Jennifer Phelps

The most frequently asked question to seniors is "Where do you want to go to college?", and the answer is "I don't know." College is one of the biggest decisions seniors have to make. Some seniors, like Christie Cleaver aren't looking forward to the painful task of filling out those obnoxious applications. "College applications take a long time to fill out. There are usually three pages or more, and then the essay." To sum it up, Amanda Sparks commented "Applying is VERY stressful.

Some seniors have it easy because they already have their hearts set on a college. "I spent my summer touring different colleges, but my favorite one was Radford," said Katie Roberts. On the other hand, Matt Thompson has his heart set for VMI. "I just want to be a rat."

Besides the task of filling out the applications and making one of the most important decisions in your life, almost every senior is looking forward to college. Chris Kraus remarked "College is going to be a great experience and I can't wait to go." Another excited senior, Ryan Gorman, said "College is a lot of hard work, but it is the most exciting time of your life."

All in all, seniors are excited about going to college, just not about making the big decision. Meanwhile, seniors are just worried about the immediate future, like Mike Denning said, "I just want to graduate." Story by Amy Cooper.

Making the Grade

Putting in time for Advance Placement Sasses

We struggle to get the grades we want every day for seven periods while we're in high school. Many students will even go on to college and do the same for an average of four more years. Still, there are some students who just can't quite make it to college to start those college classes. "I have two A.P. classes," said Matt Donaldson, "because they count toward college, hopefully they will get me ready. I'm in A.P. Latin and Government and they're both really hard."

A.P. and other special classes, such as Dual Enrollment and advanced classes do require a lot of dedication and hours of extra work. Aside from getting you ready for college, these classes often cover topics that are more in depth and vast than regular classes. "Dual Enrollment Biology is fun and interesting 'cause you learn about the homosapiens of the universe!" Kristi Dixon shared. Who wouldn't enjoy learning about the homosapiens of the universe?

Whether A.P. and special classes are enrolled in for the extra information or for the preparation for college, students are giving their time and efforts to these special classes. "A.P. Government is hard but hopefully it will prepare me for the classes in college," Amber Flippo said. Getting a head start on college and learning something new all contributed to the popularity of A.P. and special classes at Stafford. Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz.

"Who is your favorite A.P. teacher?"

"Mr. Agnew was my favorite, his class was great and I learned a lot." ~Amber Flippo

"Mr. Agnew gave a lot of work, but I learned a lot in his class." ~Rita Botts

"Mr. Dayfield was really cool, he taught us a lot and gave us answers before our quizzes."

"Mr. Agnew was the only A.P. teacher I had, but I Loved his class and learned a lot while I was in there!" ~Jean Fox

Senior class reps are excited about the future

"What do the senior class officers do!"

"They plan fundraisers for the class." ~William Keiner

"Nobody really knows." ~Mike Crosnicker

"I don't know,
they have the job of making sure we have a great senior year."
~Allison Dobson

"Officers are important in school because they keep everything running." ~ Justin Sterne

"They are all girls aren't they?"
~Jonathan Catalano

"Everything because they're awesome." ~ Christie Cleaver and Erika

The officers of the senior class constantly find themselves subject to the advice of senior class representative, Mr. Bobby Jett. All of the officers were asked to put in much work and time during their senior year. Everyone had a different aspect of the class and meetings to focus on throughout the year and they also combined the work to get the job done, whether the task was preparation for such projects as fundraising, senior T-shirts or the homecoming float. Some of the jobs given to secretary Amy Cascio involved many different duties, she explains, "I have to write down everything that happens at the meetings, write everyone's name on the back of the senior class T-shirt and I also have to run errands for Mr.

All of this hard work was in order to make their senior year and the senior year for their classmates the best it could possibly be. Apparently Crystal Carper and Amy both agreed that the privilege of being a senior class rep. has its advantages with their simultaneous explanation of, "We love working with Mr. Jett on the different projects of the senior class." A few special bonuses are included for the officers like one in particular that impressed Katie Kolakowski who excitedly explained, "The best thing is that I get to graduate 5th in the class because I'm a class officer." Not everything can be made entirely fun as senior class treasurer Erika Havasy who said, "I write receipts and count money. I hate having to write purchase orders but I love being involved with the senior class!" Story by Sean L. Farmer.

What Is That? Erika Havasy and Amy Cascio work on the computer in Mr. Jett's room. Mr. Jett was the class sponsor and the officers spent many hours working in his classroom. Photo by Carin Stoelker.

Pushed to the limit

Many students work hard to be three season athletes.

Students throughout the school year push themselves to be in an elite group. Whether it's football, wrestling, and soccer; or field hockey, basketball, and softball, these athletes are proud to be three season athletes. Even before the new school year begins many students are hard at work practicing for the upcoming sport seasons. Over the summer the football team was perfecting a running play that no doubt brought success during game time. Chad Martin, who played football for the first time this year said, "It's hard getting up knowing you're going to school in the middle of your summer."
Jay Schmitz felt the same way, "I can't believe I'm doing this in the middle of summer. I should be at the pool relaxing."

Others felt different. "I'm glad I'm doing this instead of just laying around doing nothing," replies Jason Trant. Crystal Carper felt the same way, "It's hard work now, but in the long run it will pay off and be worth all this hard work." Edith Taylor had mixed feelings, "I guess it will help later, but I just want to go home and do nothing." In the long run, three sport athletes give it all they've got all seasons of the year, and are proud of the feats they accomplish. Story by Oliver Goldman.

juniors "If you see the world in black and white you will never see the rainbows," said junior Lamar Stewart. It was statements like this that helped to show just how much our junior class had learned during its experiences in high school. Memories have helped them to not only capture the best times, but also to learn from past experiences. Now, as upperclassmen, they have many new activities to look forward to. Kari Fredette realized this when she said, "I've had a lot of great times here, but I know the best will come when I am an upperclassman. I'm excited to be a junior, but I can't help looking forward to my senior year." Sammy Newsome's most memorable experience came from his freshman year. "I'll never forget the bomb threat we had my freshman year. It was awesome getting to miss all that school," he said. Other students chose not to look backward or forward, but rather to concentrate on the memories they would make during their junior year. Graham Hope said, "The thing I am going to enjoy most this year will be the times I spend with my girlfriend, Amber Carpenter. I hope we have a great junior year together." Ryan Clore said, "It's nice to finally be an upperclassman and to be able to get respect from all the freshmen and sophomores." Junior year was an important and memorable year for students because it marked the transition from being a lower classmen to upperclassmen. This change meant added responsibility to go along with these new experiences. Story by Sara Philpott.

Dancing the night away at the Ring Dance

Is high school complete without a class ring and the traditional Ring Dance? The percentage seemed to still buy class rings, however, many complaints about the dance filled the air. Matt Slaydon felt after paying over $300 for his ring, to then go to the Ring Dance and pay more money to pick it up, was a rip-off. "Turning the ring got annoying, I forgot how many I had," commented Jenny Whitter. The dance was a normal Stafford High dance, yet with hundreds of rings. Some felt it was a worthy tradition that needed to be followed. Brittany Wood added, "More people need to go to get their rings and turn others'. Keep the Paul Neumann observed, "It was just a dance, people danced, they got their rings, everyone turned them—big deal!" Michelle Sullivan agreed with Paul, saying, "I went for 5 seconds just to see everyone and give their ring a turn, everyone was dancing- it looked like fun.

In all, the annual Ring Dance was a success. The junior class was able to earn some money and keep another Stafford tradition alive. Story by Andi Bordick.

Leading Role

Role models can be anyone or thing. "I respect people, and see them as role models, when they accomplish good things and their own goals," commented Sarah McPherson. Students model themselves after sports heroes, movies stars, and even their teachers and parents.

Roles from when we were little to now, have changed a great deal; with maturity and insight we seem to have developed better models to follow after. "When I was little I wanted to be just like Wonder Woman or a Smurf or something, but my role models now are real people who have accomplished my dreams," Katherine Kimbrell expressed. She was truthful when she said "accomplished her dreams", that is what models are made of.

From another view, role models can cause confusion and even hurt in those who follow famous lifestyles. Mrs. Sigler was disturbed that Kevin Costner was able to leave his wife of sixteen years with no remorse; hundreds of kids were hurt by the news of a twisted Pee Wee Herman, and even girls disgusted by Cindy Crawford choice of modeling jobs. However, people must realize a famous person makes mistakes and choices that they chose whether or not the public agrees with it.

India Clemens avoids the problem of being let down by looking up to her mom. She feels her mom makes good choices, is intelligent, and feels safe that she won't let her down as the idealistic famous world can and frequently does.

Everyone needs a model and someone to look up to. Hopefully that role model will motivate their followers to become all they can be and to accomplish all they wish. Story by Andi Bordick.

Class Officers

Class officers helping to make a great junior year.

Being a junior, students looked forward to many privileges that came along with it, yet they were also forced to realize the many newfound responsibilities. And who better to head those important jobs than the Junior class officers?

Many wondered about the jobs of the class officers; what exactly do they do? President Courtney Berry

Many wondered about the jobs of the class officers; what exactly do they do? President Courtney Berry explained it well when she said, "Over the summer we went to Hemlock to learn leadership skills. Now that school's started, we're busy getting ready for the ring dance, homecoming, and collecting dues. But since we're juniors, our main concern is prom." Officers must also go to all of the junior class meetings and help fund-raise for the many events which Juniors attend.

However, in order for juniors to attend all these special events (like prom) they must have paid their dues. Sometimes it was hard to get someone to give up 20 bucks for their class. "Being a class officer has a lot more responsibility than being a police officer because I can't just put a gun to someone's head to get them to pay their dues," said secretary Laura Crigler. But in order for juniors to go to prom, dues must have been paid on time.

As juniors, the main focus (of course) was prom. "We're really focusing on trying to make this year's prom one of the best," said vice-president Valerie Thompson. Fund-raisers included things like selling candy and T-shirts and the ever-so-talked about ring dance

But the officers cannot do everything. They rely on their class to help them out in their responsibilities. All Juniors know by now that these special events were privileges—not rights—and without support from the class, might be taken away. But most of the officers held a positive outlook on the situation and had faith in their class; such as Janean Neal who said "This should be a great year, I'm very excited about being the Junior Class treasurer." Story by Nicole Brors.

Study, Study, Study Working vigorously, Courtney Berry uses her spare time getting a jump start on her homework. It was important that class officers keep their studies up and act as good role models for their peers. Many students realized the importance of keeping their grades up throughout high school. Friends

Friendships for a lifetime are made in high school.

Have you ever wondered what a school day would be like without your friends? "One of the most important parts of school is friends," said Katie Roberts. On a day to day basis, friends are there to comfort and support you. "Friends are what make the school year go faster," commented Brandi Sharp.

Each year brings about opportunities to meet and get to know more people. As Melanie Allen said, "I enjoy meeting new friends every school year." Some of these friendships will last a lifetime. Laura Calloway said it best, "Friends are forever." Story by Amy

Style, Grace and Trends The changing trends of Stafford

THE 'DO Hairstyles at Stafford have undergone many changes through the years, but they never fail to be innovative and unique. They are a symbol of who we are. Soloman Rattley could be seen sportin' this 'do around the halls of SHS. Photo by Darragh Copley

The students at Stafford had many different styles this past year. From flashbacks like flare leg jeans, purple hair, white Oxford shirts and V-neck sweaters, trends varied from student to student.

Many students felt as though Stafford's trends had changed a lot from the past. "Stafford used to be redneck heaven and now everybody's a freak," said Allyn Hood, "Now everybody's wearin' vintage clothes and dying their hair, but not bleach blonde like it used to be; now it's purple, green, orange; you never know what you'll see somebody wearing.

This year, though vintage was still very popular, students also brought back "preppie" styles. Classics, like jeans and white, buttonup shirts with sweaters around the waist were visible nearly anywhere

The overall trend for the year, however, appeared to be comfortable. Whether your outfit was classy or sporty, it was always casual and above all else it was comfortable. "I like a lot of the more comfortable styles this year, sweaters and jeans or sweatshirts, stuff that's casual," said Liz Lewis, of this year's fashions. Others, however, like freshman J.R. Cooper, thought that "people should just wear what they like.

Another growing trend at Stafford this year was body piercing. People could be seen with pierced eyebrows and tongues, in addition to three or four, and sometimes more, extra holes in their ears. Christian French wasn't too comfortable with that whole idea. His conclusion was, "body piercing scares me, especially on guys!" Well, to each his own, though, to some at Stafford body piercing was not only cool, but also pretty popular. The trends continued to change as the year progressed, but people kept their individual style through their own unique fads and personality expressions. Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz.

A "HOLE" NEW TREND Piercing used to mean a couple little studs in your ears. These days, however, girls and guys alike are piercing eyebrows, belly buttons, tongues, lips and noses as well. Josh Sullivan displayed his piercing which included his lip, eyebrow and a few in his ears. Photo by Darragh Copley.

Park'n Pass

Students go wild over the limited parking passes

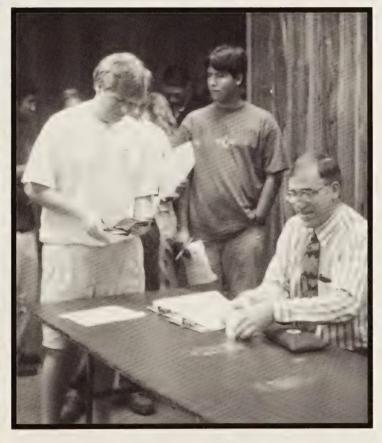

Parking permits went on sale earlier in the week for the more privileged seniors. Some came early and some stretched the wait out until late in the week. Justin Sterne said, "I had to get here about 6:30 and I got out of line around 7:15." For others the wait only took a few precious moments, like William Keiner who said, "I got here at 7:15 and waited for five minutes and was done." Not every junior or senior at school needed a parking permit, like senior Melanie Allen who explained, "I don't have a car so I didn't have to wait." Of course some people knew that there were definite advantages to having a pass, and felt that if you wanted one you had better get up and get it. Caroline Miles was a definite supporter of that theory when she remarked, "If you want one, you better get out of bed, get your butt to school, and get one." Story by Sean L. Farmer

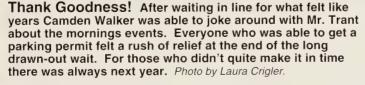

Early To Rise Some students will do anything to get a parking pass, especially the Juniors on the first day that they can buy parking permits. Sleepily waiting in line around 4:00 in the morning Alden Hingle, Mike Doremus, Darragh Copley, Genny Rankin and fellow classmates arrived just in time to be number twenty in line. Students arrived at school so early that the gate hadn't been unlocked yet. Photo by Laura Happy to be here. Not everyone was depressed to have to go to school every day of the week; some students managed to make Fridays bearable. Happily talking on the way in to school Chris Bowman, Allyson Rose and Alison Hales tried to make the day go by as quickly as possible. At Stafford it was very obvious who was and was not the morning crowd around school. Photo by Jessica Rose.

The pain of home and school work.

It struck terror into the hearts of students; just the mention of its name ruined any thought of after school plans. The word homework shot down your social life and sometimes could kill your weekend. "Homework stinks! I don't know how many hours a week I spend doing it," remarked Lisa Mendoza. Chris Holcomb said, "I can see the point of school work, maybe, but what's the point of homework? Do the teachers enjoy ruining our weekends and making our lives a total mess?" Julie Martens added, "I just don't see the point, I mean, we do enough work at school."

That brought up another issue, school work. "It's bad enough doing homework, but on top of that we have to do additional school work for homework," remarked Nathan Havasy. Some didn't even bother with the work, like Cory Harding who had this to say, "I just sleep though everything, it makes no difference." Michael Brown, who had a different view, said, "I guess it's not that bad. At least it makes our futures look brighter." Angela Wilson agreed with Mike and said, "It's not as bad as some people say. Homework just gets a bad rap." In the end Sam Hall summed it up best by saying, "At times it can be a bore, but in the long run it really helps you get a decent grade." Story by Oliver Goldman.

Pump Up That Spirit Cheering for the blue and gold.

School spirit was a great way for students to show support for their school. Every Friday students would roam hallways filled with spirit signs or dressed up in

During the fall season, many students enjoyed getting all dressed up for football games. "It's fun to get painted up and cheer our team on," said Caroline Miles about the Friday night games. Many male students would be seen with painted letters on their chest spelling out things like "STAFFORD" or "SHS".

The more spirit you have, the more fun you can have," said Todd Coates. Many seniors made the most of their last year at Stafford and put forth a lot of energy into making school fun. "The senior class this year has a lot of school spirit. We all love and support Stafford through sports activities and spirit events," contributed Alex Doyal.

Spirit is definitely an essential part of going through high school. Liz Lewis explained her view of things when she said, "Once the seniors leave, it's gonna be totally dead." Adrienne Brown agreed saying, "The class of '99 has no spirit and they need to get some before we're seniors or it won't be as much fun.'

But whatever the outlook on school spirit was, there were always people who would keep it going and follow through with blue and gold day every Friday. As Angela Wilson explained "If everyone was as spirited as the head-to-toe blue and gold fans were, this school would be a lot more exciting." Story by Nicole

Ripped, Fit, & Buff

Working out to stay fit, trim, and in good health.

The new trend is being fit. Working out, running, and playing sports is the new fad and way to occupy your after school life. "I enjoy working out, it takes away anger, gives me energy, and gets me ready for wrestling," Matt Korniotes expressed.

Places like Highlander, Bodyworks, and the new and improved "Y" carry top of the line equipment and allow teen membership, which helps you to workout with a friend. Kensley Whitler commented, "Working out makes me feel good about myself, but I hate to do it without a friend!

The school also helps to shape up students in the weight room. Gym teachers try to get students in the room to learn about weights, hoping to push the students to work out on their own. Sports teams also take advantage of the room (especially the football team) making tougher linemen and working on their leg strength. Dan Mullins added, "It taught me about the equipment, and now I can make my pecs move.' However, some students' only workout time is gym class. Jay Blevins commented, "The only time I do a weight workout is in P.E. class.'

Getting fit helps people to feel good about themselves, take out anger or other feelings. It can even be a place to make new friends. And remember, the warm weather is fast approaching and you do not want to get caught with your "winter body." So go and work out! Story by Andi Bordick.

Familiar Faces

Students do their best to live at home and school with their fellow-brother or sister.

> High school can be a time for meeting new people and seeing faces they've never seen before. However, for some, they see faces they've seen all their life. This is the case for those who have a brother or sister attending the same school.

> For older siblings, it's rather odd to see their younger brother or sister finally in the same school as them. As Kim Cooper said, "It feels weird passing my little brother in the halls." It can be a strange experience for some to see their brother or sister in the same school as them for the first time.

On the other hand, some siblings are the same age and have been going to the same school for years. Siblings closer in age are a whole different story. "It's ok since we are twins and we basically have the same friends; we are kind of like friends." said Betsy Decatur. "I think it's cool sometimes, but other times we pretend like we don't know each other," said her twin Bobbi Decatur.

Some students didn't mind having their brother or sister in the same building because they don't even realize they're there. Alison Rankin said "It's kind of weird but I don't see her very often anyways." On the other hand her sister Genny Rankin said, "I can't do anything that I wouldn't want my sister to find out." Many students in Stafford view having their brother or sister in the same building as an advantage. "If I forget money, I can always borrow it from him," said Nicole Dauch about her younger brother.

Whatever the views were on the situation, it's one that simply can't be avoided. Therefore many students look on the bright side of things. "It's fine because me and my brother are friends and we get along pretty well," said Becky Doyal, smiling. Story By

Aides & Electives

Breaking from the ordinary & broadening ones knowledge.

Every year students chose to take classes that were not required for college to fill up their schedules. These classes came in a wide range, from video broadcasting, to band, to sign language, to P.E. "Taking sign language gives me the chance to learn something new and not have to worry about passing it just for college," said Brandi Sharp. Students like Erin Kerby like to have a break in their day away from the Science, History, and English. "Even though the elective classes are graded they're not as tough and the pressure and stress doesn't come with it."

Along with classes, some students enjoyed being aides throughout the day. Melanie Allen said, "Being an attendance aide gives you a chance to relax, and take a breather." Aides always gave relief to teachers and office workers by running passes and finishing up the odds and ends that needed to be taken care of. "I help Mr. Dayfield out, and at the same time it's fun for me," said Christie Cleaver. Kim Murphy remarked "Being an office aide is exciting. There is something new to do everyday, and when there is no work, I finish my homework."

All in all, students liked their elective periods because they not only got a break in the day, but they could choose something they're interested in, and take the skills they learned with them throughout life. Story by Amy Cooper.

On top of it all

Keeping the school running smoothly.

HELPING HANDS In the guidance office, Mrs. Cooley was there to help students with everything from schedule changes to college applications. The guidance department was always a busy place to visit, in turn, many students looked to Mrs. Cooley for help with minor problems. Photo by Mary Curtis Smart.

Where would our school be without the likes of janitors, cafeteria workers, nurses, security guards and officer workers? "The office staff and the janitors and everybody really keep everything running okay at Stafford; they are a lot busier than most people think," said Meghan Snellings. The behind-the-scenes people in our school are the ones we rely on everyday to get our breakfast and lunches, to keep us healthy, and to make our school clean and safe for us.

We do appreciate their efforts here at Stafford. Sabree Duff and Ryan Graham both agreed that the janitors and the cafeteria workers were great. "The people in the cafeteria are really cool," said Ryan Graham. "I especially like the breakfast people, Mama and Bryan; they're all really nice," Sabree Duff added.

There are also the office staff and the guards who monitor the comings and goings of people in our school. Not only do they keep us in check, but they make sure we are protected from people outside our school too. Lauren Pscoylar said, "I'm glad they are all there so you know they'll be there if something goes wrong." A lot of appreciation is owed to these workers for making sure our days at Stafford go smoothly. Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz.

A LITTLE GUIDANCE Students with any sort of dilemma could always find a listening ear in the guidance department. Mrs. West, in only her second year at SHS was turned to by many students, not only as a counselor, but also as a friend. The Big Moment

As students move through school they prepare for their first drive

One of the most popular events, one of the most awaited moments, and one of the largest perks for most sophomores and some juniors during high school was getting their driver's license. The sophomore class went to driver's ed. to learn all the things that go along with driving, like red means stop, green means go, and keep the vehicle between the lines. Joe Johnson said, "I don't think I should have to take a class to learn about something I already know how to do." Although some students did not like the class they still found it easy. Jan Augustine said, "Drivers ed. is soooo easy. All we did was talk about driving and all the rules, things that everybody already knew anyway." Several tests and other activities were used to prepare the students for their responsibility and privilege of driving.

The other aspect of school that involved getting a driver's license was going to behind-the-wheel. Mrs. Shelton and Mrs. Perry instruct the students and give them advice as to what they were doing wrong or what they were doing right. Students took the journey rain or shine, cold or warm, to the parking area behind the football stadium every day in order be educated in the field of driving. Jamie Hyllian said, "It's really horrible having to walk all the way up there every day." Story by Sean L. Farmer.

Out For a Ride Out at the good old Driver Education student range, students got instructions on drills like parallel parking, turning and what to do in different traffic situations. Before being able to go out to the driving range students had to pass the classroom course and have a learner's permit. Photo by Laura Crigler.

Put er' in reverse! Students were taught everything, no matter how much they knew prior to their enrollment in behind-the-wheel. To complete the course and get their driver's license students had to pass a test on being able to drive. Photo by Laura Crigler.

Doing their Job

"It's hard work, but it's worth it," remarked sophomore class president Meaghan Wilson. Meaghan was among the four class officers that were elected by their fellow students. Meaghan, who was an honor roll student and played basketball for the Lady Indians, took her job seriously. "Some people just blow it off and just use it as something on a college application.

The class vice president, Sara Hatcher, had this to say on the duties of her job: "I think it's really cool to take part in something like this. It really shows that you're dedicated." Sara was very active in the school, taking part in field hockey, basketball and softball

The secretary and treasurer might not be as high profile jobs as the president and vice president, but they worked just as hard. Jessica Player, who was the sophomore class secretary remarked, "I enjoyed working on the homecoming float and participating in all the events that we as a class were involved in." Jessica was a cheerleader for the I.V. squad.

Brandi Lauderman, the class treasurer, was very excited about her job. "I think it's a great job. I'd love to do this again!" Brandi was also a J.V. cheerleader and participated as the J.V. soccer manager.

Throughout the school year the class officers helped to represent the sophomores not only with the float at homecoming, but also with all the other work that had to be done. Story by Oliver Goldman.

The new experiences of high school were both exciting and frightening for the freshmen. They had to learn to adapt to the fast pace which was very different than that of middle school. "The halls are so crowded that it is hard to get to class on time. You can easily get lost in the crowd," said Laura Clary. Freshmen had to take more responsibility for their actions because the teachers did not have the time to give the individual attention that was provided in middle school. However, a supportive teacher could make a big difference in a student's first impression of high school. "The teachers here are really nice," said Jessica Poe. She then added, with a smile, "The guys are also really cute!"

Other freshmen weren't as impressed with the social scene of high school. Tara Tillman said, "People spread a lot of rumors, and those rumors spread very fast." Still, many were happy with the new pool of friends they had available to them. It gave them the possibility to meet a wide variety of people, each with different experiences to share.

Another adjustment freshmen were forced to make was in their schedule. While they had previously not begun school until 8:20 AM, high school began at 7:45 AM. This provided a problem to some students who needed all the extra sleep they could get. "I wish school would start later so I could sleep in a little longer," said Patrick Perrone. However, most of the students were able to adjust to these changes without much trouble. The biggest obstacle they faced was the constant heckling of the upperclassmen. If they survived this, they were on their way to a happy high school career. Story by Sara Philpott.

Welcome

Freshmen adjust to life in high school

In The Halls Waiting for their next class, Danny Labor, Courtney Johnston, Colby Stevenson, and Mike Farley stop to chat in the hallway. Time between classes was a welcome break from the otherwise busy day of learning. However, students had to make sure they allowed themselves enough time to make it to class on time. Photo by Courtney Berry

Homework Looking up from her book, Melissa Love sits by Danielle Durham while waiting for the morning bell. Freshmen enjoyed the extra time in the morning, unlike having to sit in a homeroom as they did in middle school. Time in the mornings is not only used to catch up on unfinished homework, but also a good time to socialize before going to class. Photo by Courtney Berry

Don't be Late Standing by their lockers, Joey Newton and Josh Mills talk for a minute. Getting to know the people around their lockers was a great way for freshmen to meet new people. Photo by Courtney Berry.

Freshmen had many mixed feelings about high school as they first experienced the life they would be living for the next four years.

Surprisingly, the class of 2001 wasn't so intimidated by the upperclassmen of high school. Many of them enjoyed having the new freedom that high school brings; others were overcome by the responsibilities they were forced to face.

Íf anything, entering high school was a well awaited event. "It's better than middle school," said Courtney Johnson. Tonya Wellerman agreed, "We get a lot more freedom.

Though many of the freshmen's first impression was on a good note, there were some who were surprised at the hard tasks of their classes. Nada Zaiden said, "There's more work and it's a lot harder." Many realized it was not always as easy as they thought it would be. "There is way more homework than I had expected," commented Amy Janis.

Besides the homework, freshmen were also surprised by the amount of people here. "The first thing I noticed was how many people were here," said Brian Gillespie. Ashley Payne joined in, "It's really crowded in the halls.

But no matter what the view on coming to high school, it's always an experience. The freshmen get used to the ways of high school and soon all middle school trends are lost. Though the first impression may be pretty rough, through the years students eventually fall into place. Story by Nicole Brors.

Annugggggghhh!!! Trying to get to class on time.

To most students the massive crowds in the halls are annoying and uncontrolled. After years at Stafford people tend to get used to it with the understanding that it will never get comfortable. The hardest thing as a freshman is adjusting to the size of the crowds and the general mayhem. When asked, two freshmen said they were too squished and crowded, feeling little and scared in the halls.

Some felt the halls caused fire hazards and problems. Heather Harrelson commented, "I think they are dangerous and harmful to the handicapped." As if freshmen didn't need more adjustments coming to high school, the crowds made them wish for the days in middle school and the ease in changing classes.

Hopefully by the end of the four long years, the halls and their crowds will not be noticed much. They may never get better, but at least freshmen students will adjust and not be as intimidated anymore! Story by Andi Bordick.

Hello, my name is...

Freshmen struggle to find their place.

Ha! Ha! Ha! Talking to Ginny Street, Brett Lively takes a break from school work. Students liked to converse whenever the teacher allowed them time to. They just had to be sure they didn't interrupt class while chatting. Photo by Courtney Berry.

As if trying to get into the swing of being in high school wasn't enough, freshmen were also forced to make new friends. "Most of my friends from middle school weren't in any of my classes so I had to meet new people," said Kristen Maddox, "but now I know twice as many people, so it's cool."

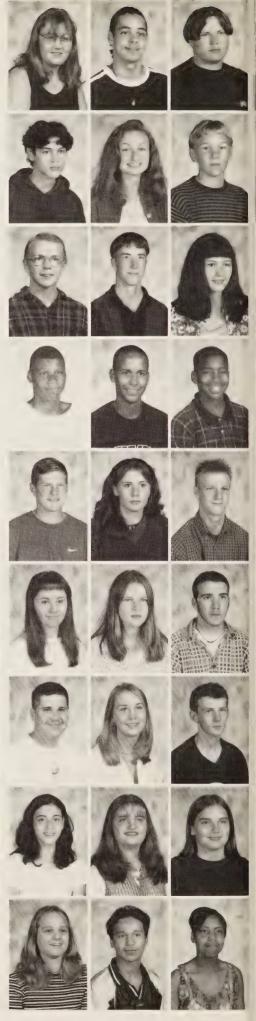

On the other hand, some freshmen already felt like they had new friends, even before high school began. Such was the case with Laurie Cooney who said, "A lot of people I didn't even know knew who I was because of my sister (Colleen Cooney)."

Whatever the feeling of making new friends was, freshmen usually found their place. "At first I was nervous because I didn't think I'd know that many people, but I knew more than I thought so it wasn't really so bad," said Ian Campbell. Alan Cascio agreed: "There were a lot of people I didn't know, but there were also quite a few who I did."

Though the school has grown from past years, most freshmen agreed that it wasn't as bad as they thought it would be. And as Chris Hines said, "It helps to know people before you get here." Story by Nicole Brors.

The Dance

Freshman Dancing the Night Away

On a typical Friday night, students would gather at the stadium for an intense football game. Afterwards, freshmen would gather in the cafeteria to go to their first high school dance and would dance the night away with their friends. "It's much different than middle school, it's a whole lot of fun, and I love meeting new people," said Mike Powers. Michelle Muhlenkamp agreed saying, "After the game everyone is pumped up and ready to dance the night away." Not only is the dance a time for fun, but it gives the freshmen a time to socialize and meet new

Another new experience for freshmen was Homecoming. This was the first formal dance for most freshmen. Not many freshmen attended, but Laurie Watts commented, "I had a blast. It was an experience I never was able to experience in middle school." This was the first of many formal dances the freshman said attend in their high school career. Story by Amy Cooper.

Cafeteria Chaos

matches the experience of facing the cafeteria for the first time. Outrageous lunch lines, hoards of people, senior sections. It's hard not to feel sorry for those little freshmen fighting their way into lunch. It could be frustrating and scary to come to that first lunch freshman year. Patti Hurlock, who was a junior this year, remembered her freshmen year. "Once you found your friends, it wasn't bad," she said in comfort.

'I didn't think it was a big deal, with all those people, no one really paid any attention to anyone else," contributed Josh Ozura, who was a freshmen this year. "I had second lunch my freshmen year and it was really crowded so it was hard finding my friends at first, so that was pretty annoying," said Jay Blevins about his freshmen year. Alan Withers didn't seem to think it was a very big thing either. "I just didn't really care, I found people I knew and I sat

Whether you had a place to sit or made new friends trying to find one, eating lunch at SHS for the first time made for an interesting experience. Courtney Johnston confessed that she was "a little nervous the first day that she wouldn't be in lunch with any of her friends, but it turned out okay."

We all have to overcome our fears eventually, so the freshmen brought their fears to lunch and realized that everything was going to be all right! Story by Kristin

New faces at SHS are appearing from all over the place

Students at Stafford do not always come from Stafford or Virginia, sometimes these students are not even from the United States. Foreign exchange students represent a part of the population at school and can be spotted in the hall all the time. One of the foreign exchange students roaming the hall and taking in the sites in and around Stafford was Silke Gunther. Silke came from Germany and adapted well to the chaos of the school. Silke said, "The people here are definitely more open."

Not all the new faces at Stafford were from different countries; some of the student body was made up from students that transferred from other schools. Some of the new arrivals came from California, New York and even from just up the road at Brooke Point and North Stafford High School. Kevin Fenton explained, "I used to live here in Clearview and then we moved to California. Now we have moved back and live in the same house we used to." Another new student attending SHS is senior Corrine Russell, who transferred to Stafford from North Stafford. She said, "There isn't a lot of difference between North and South, but this school seems to focus more on sports than North. There also seems to be more school spirit." Story by Sean L. Farmer.

Workin' Hard Doing their best to stay awake in one of their more interesting classes Nick Whelpley and his friend Ben Schabert look onward. For the foreign exchange and the new students at Stafford getting changed over into the new way of life turned out to be rather simple. After a few weeks at their new school it wasn't hard to figure out which class would be their favorite. Photo by Carin Stoelker.

Live and Learn Very content to be able to sit back and relax and maybe even learn something along the way, Adam Peck tries to keep up with his studies. With all the new things at SHS to experience and to try out the new students always had something to keep themselves busy. Life at school was always changing and constantly throwing new ideas at students. Photo by Carin Stoelker

France to USA Looking forward to another creative day in Ms. Dittmar's art class, Romain LeBorgne prepares for class. For the students who came over from other countries the change they experienced was both good and bad. When Romain came over from France one of his goals was to play basketball for Stafford. Leading the Way Freshman class offices help guide the future

"We have a responsibility to help lead the class of 2001," remarked Îan Campbell. Ian was privileged enough to be the freshman class president this year and boasted about the class whenever he could. "Even though we don't get enough credit, being freshmen and all, we'll always be there to give a helping hand." Ian turned out to be a fine choice for class officer and ran the class of 2001 with little trouble.

Lorie Watts was honored enough to be the vice president of the freshmen class. She said, "I help Ian when he needs to get things done." When Lorie was needed she helped to make the freshman class what it

Annie Strickler was excited about being class treasurer, saying, "I know it doesn't sound as if I would do much, but I handle all the money and keep track of all the records; it's a very tough job." Annie proved to do a great job as treasurer.

Hanan Nassau held the office of freshman class secretary. "I was happy to help my class," remarked Hanan. He then added, "Anybody would do this job. I was just lucky enough to be chosen for this position." In the end all of the freshman class officers proved to themselves and the rest of the school that they could do their jobs well. Story by Oliver Goldman.

The Backbone of the School

Who's the first to arrive everyday, and the last to leave? Administrators, teachers, counselors, and secretaries are here everyday and make up the backbone of the school.

The principal, Mr. William Pugh, and our vice-principals, Mr. Trant, Mr. Strickler, and Mr. Price, all work together to make our school run smoothly. Yes, most students like to keep their distance, but they are all fun and easy to get along with. Mr. Pugh describes himself as 'The Michael Jordon of the school because I get paid to do something I love to do.

The teachers are responsible for the education of all of us. Believe it or not, this is no easy job, especially when Spring fever hits. A lot of teachers like making learning fun, like Mr. Andrews. "I like to make teaching fun because I love what I teach and I want my students to enjoy it as well.

The secretaries and all other faculty members are the glue that keeps everything together. What would we do without early outs, or the cafe workers to serve our food?

Last, but not least, the guidance counselors deserve a lot of credit. How would you like to be responsible for the schedules and problems of over 1600 students? Seniors are especially grateful when it comes to their college applications.

All in all, without any of our wonderful faculty members, we would not have a great school like Stafford. Story by Amy

REQUIREMENTS

ENGLISH AND HISTORY

Since birth we have been taught English. As we grow up we learn to read it, write it, and perfect our grammar. School adds to the chaos by requiring it. Some students still lack the knowledge of the language they have been taught for life. When asked, Chad Martin said this of English: "En clase de Engles, mi amigos y yo tuvemos—." Trying again Matt Korniotes joked, "The art of the English language is one of respect and world renowned knowledge. The importance and significance is great in today's world and I feel privileged to be offered such a grand course here at Stafford High." Yet we do need these "common" skills of grammar, reading, and writing to survive

Another required course is History. The teaching of our nation's history and the building of a respectable nation is taught by many intelligent teachers here at Stafford. The class may grow boring, yet teachers, such as Mr. Powell, keep activities under their sleeves when the time arises for excitement. When asked, Jennie Tuscany said, "Mr. Powell makes History interesting, never have I been so excited to go to a class." Other juniors felt the same way of their History teachers, and enjoyed the chance to learn of

The requirements of Stafford and any high school are to teach students the things they should know. Without the knowledge of English, what would we speak? Without the knowledge of our nation, where would our pride be? Story by Andi Bordick

EQUATIONS

SO MUCH TO LEARN, AND SO LITTLE TIME.

For some students, science and math may be their easiest classes; for others however, they struggle to stay ahead. Students are found in an array of different classes based on their preference or ability level. "Math Analysis was really hard for me so I dropped down to Algebra III," said Brett Lively. Michelle Dean agreed, "Math Analysis is really hard but I stuck with it and I'm not doing so bad."

In the science area, students enjoyed a lot of privileges of their individual classes. Those who are in marine biology got to go on a boating trip, while those in Physics enjoyed a number of projects to test their creative ability. "When we did the egg drop, mine didn't break," said Alex Doyal. Physics students also made miniature scale bridges and tested their weight endurance. "Our bridge held the maximum weight of 78 pounds," said sisters Elizabeth and CeCe Cho. Hunter Matheson and Katherine Kimbrell's bridge held more than the maximum weight. "Mr. Byrne ran out of weights," said Hunter Matheson. Some who were in Geology went on a field trip to find rocks for their class, such as Shannon Barnes, who said, "I found some cute little rocks that I'll get to make stuff out of for class.'

Yet, no matter what science or math the students were in, they all had different ups and downs. Whether they were in biology, chemistry or physics, science was a creative learning experience. As for math, well, in simple terms Caroline Miles said, "Well, math is math. I don't like it but I've gotta live with it." Story by Nicole Brors

TERRIFIC TUNES

STRIKE UP THE BAND

When walking up the P.E. hallway, have you ever stopped outside to listen to the wonderful melodies emerging from the band room? This music is coming from Stafford's three bands.

Stafford's band department is composed of the wind ensemble, symphonic band, and jazz band. The wind ensemble is composed of students who excel in their music abilities, and are thinking of making it a career later in life. The symphonic band is for students to work on their technique and eventually move into wind ensemble. Finally, the jazz band is for students who want to explore their creative side. This band does not restrict its players to one type or piece of sheet music, but allows them to ad lib as they continue.

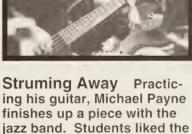

Everyone at Stafford got to see the talents of these students at the annual Christmas concert. These students also performed at their festival where they played to receive a rating. Traditionally Stafford's band receives superior ratings, which is the highest rating possible.

Travis Cooper and Jon Barnum summed it up by saying, "The band is the most fun we will ever have and it has been full of experiences we will remember for the rest of our lives. When we perform it is the biggest rush we will ever feel when our fellow school mates cheer us on." Story by Amy Practice makes Perfect Students in band classes had to constantly practice their talents in order to improve. Megan Thomas practiced during her music period in the band room. It was a relaxing part of the day for many students to get away from tests and written work.

IN HARMONY

ORCHESTRA & CHORUS FILL THE SCHOOL WITH THE SOUND OF MUSIC

Where would Stafford be without the harmony of our orchestra and choral groups? Not only do they add to our seasonal concerts, they compete and sing their way into various awards and honors. Chorus and orchestra consists of students with a true love of music and enjoyment in performing.

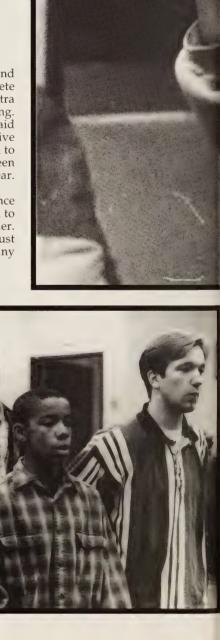

"Chorus gives me a chance to act and to sing at the same time," said Amanda Smith. The music programs, such as chorus and orchestra, give students like Amanda the opportunity to explore the musical field and to experience performing and being on center stage. Peter Bennett has been playing the cello since middle school and was in orchestra this past year. "I've been doing it a long time; it takes practice," Peter commented.

The music programs at Stafford create opportunities and the experience needed for students who want to pursue music in the future. "It's cool to have a class where you turn in music, not just book work," said Johann Ohler. Whether their goal was to be a professional singer or musician or they just really had a love for music, the music department was a big part of many student's Stafford High adventure! Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz

Getting it Together The chorus program included many groups for boys and girls to combine their skills. Nathan Havasy, Bryan Eland, Jennifer Swansburg, Gee Gee Bean and Alex Doyal all practiced for the annual Christmas Choral Concert.

Yearbook Sale As the year started off so did the sales of the yearbooks. Aaron Austin and Danielle King prepare signs for the beginning of the sales. Many efforts were made by the yearbook staff to get sales up and running early on in the year. Photo by Laura Crigler.

Getting Down Low Throughout the year photographers are taught to move around while taking pictures; Jessica Rose demonstrates one of these methods. NEW:

BRINGING BACK THE INFO

Hurry, rush, get there quick, take the picture, get the quote, tape the game, get back to class, and begin revising it. The end. Well, not really, but it might seem that way to those who have the privilege of watching these students get their work done. Yet, as always, in the end the students of photo journalism, journalism, and video broadcasting prevailed, producing another great Indian Legend, Smoke Signal, and Video Yearbook that contained all the great memories of the year.

The yearbook staff was led by the yearbook genius Mr. Mark Hughes, who was responsible for keeping everything running smoothly during the stressful weeks prior to the completion of the yearbook. Students were responsible for gathering quotes, pictures and information, and then laying it all out for the yearbook. All students, whether they were a writer or designer or photographer, had many deadlines to keep up with during the year. Each week writers and photographers turned in their deadlines to be edited; after that was done the designers then laid everything out. There was the constant encouragement and advice from Mr. Hughes who said, "You all are doing a great job. Just don't get behind on your deadlines. Yearbook students had many responsibilities." Danielle King said, "Having to keep up with all the seniors' stats and get them typed in on time gets to be a pain but

The Smoke Signal was kept in constant forward motion by Mr. Brian Driver who helped out with the paper whenever he was needed. Students that made it through the first year of journalism and decided to take it for a second year got to work on the paper. For the most part the first year was to prepare students for working on the school paper. In her second year of journalism Beth MacDonald said, "I'm really glad I took it last year because it has made this year so much more fun." Each student contributed to at least one section of the newspaper, doing their part to make the Smoke Signal an

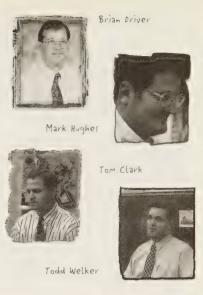

Finally the video broadcasting classes were kept on the move by their teacher Mr. Tom Clark. Throughout the year the students had many different projects to keep up with. For some students an occasional appearance on the morning announcements was enough to keep busy with. Yet, whatever students say, there was plenty to keep them busy. Katie Kolakowski said, "We take video and bring it back and go through the whole process of editing it." Another video broadcasting related project was the infamous video yearbook. After being introduced during the 96-97 school year, the video yearbook once again was incorporated into the big scheme of journalism related topics. Senior Morgan Baker worked long and hard on the video yearbook and said, "So far the video yearbook is coming along great; right now we are editing some tape and putting it together." Story by Sean L.

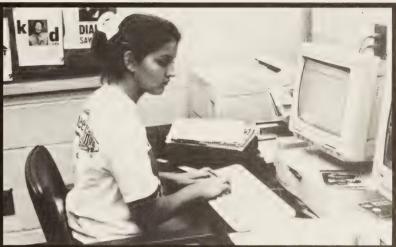

Type Much? For all the writers in yearbook it was necessary to be able to type fast. Nicole Brors worked hard all year to keep her stories up to date and to have them typed in on time. The entire yearbook was laid out on the computers in the yearbook room, the writers typed in their deadlines, and the designers scanned in the pictures taken by the photographers. Throughout the year various sections of the yearbook were sent in to the company responsible for producing it. Photo by Laura Crigler.

It's Conference Time After everything has been caught up, checked, turned in, and revised, Brittany Jennings and Mr. Driver sit down and talk about each little detail with her work for the latest issue of the Smoke Signal. Communication was a key issue in Journalism because everybody had to work together. Photo by Laura Crigler.

FUTURE PLANS

PREPARING FOR THEIR FUTURE

"These classes help prepare us for the future and help us in the real world," said Kristen Ripley about the business, vocational and technology classes here at Stafford. There was a wide range of classes from CIS, (Computer Information System) to video broadcasting to auto mechanics, and other various courses. "There is a lot of basic programing too," said Tasha Nfickens. She then added, "As long as you follow the teachers' instructions you'll do just fine." Most of the students enjoyed taking a break from the paper work to take these classes. "The class helps me take a break from the regular paperwork," remarked Matt Cribb. "It's the type of class that helps boost up your GPA," remarked Emily Godfrey. Kyle Boutchyard totally disagreed, "It's hard keeping up with the work because everything is new to you." All in all everyone seemed to enjoy taking these classes, and in turn helping build their futures. Story by Oliver Goldman.

EXPRESSIONS

THE IN'S AND OUT'S

Talented artists and actors are among the students that walk the halls each day. Evidence of their hard work can be found in the display case outside the art room and the plays they perform each year. Art and drama are their means of expression.

'Art is my way of expressing myself and my frustrations with the world. Besides, it's something I'm actually good at," noted Frank Trivett. For students, it's more than a simple class, it's a way to take a break and put thoughts and feelings down on paper. Mrs. Dittmar said, "I like seeing the different diversity and art of everybody when I give them the same assign-

The drama team at Stafford is made up of very talented and dedicated actors. This year's production was "The Works of William Shakepeare, Abridged." This play came off as a success. These talented actors put in time rehearsing lines and practicing to make the play look like perfection. Many of these casts members not only saw drama as an extracurricular activity, but a career path.

All in all, these creative students are greatly appreciated for all of their hard work and dedication. We will probably see them succeed and see their work in an art gallery, or watch them on a Broadway production. Story by Tests... I hate tests, Stephanie Stuller tells herself as she regrets taking foreign language. Taking a foreign language was a requirement in order to graduate. Spanish was the most popular one taken. Photo by Rita Botts.

A COMMON PHRASE HEARD BY STUDENTS IN THE FOREIGN LANGUAGE HALLWAY

Stafford offers many language courses ranging from Spanish to Japanese. To graduate, at least three years of one language or two years of two different languages are required. Stephanie Heffermen felt, "I wouldn't take a foreign language class if I didn't have to.'

However, many students pursue a language and attempt to learn everything about it. There are many language clubs and events that bring students closer together for a great cultural experience. Jessye Cooley commented, "Even though many students find it a nuisance, it will be useful in the future." Jessye is in her fifth year of Spanish and feels the fun and relaxed atmosphere of her current class was worth the struggle of the other years.

Taking a language is not just based on the grammatical usage. Students learn a diverse mix of things. Cramer Thompson stated, "I am in my 3rd year of German and I have learned history, culture, and life-styles, as well as the language." Yet some still feel it is a waste of their time. "By the time I had gone through almost four years of French, I realized that the language didn't make much sense at all and I didn't really like it," Adrienne Brown ex-

HEALTHY & SAFE DRIVERS

P.E. AND DRIVER'S ED. OFFER A BREAK FROM THE DAILY ROUTINE

Part of being an underclassmen is the ever-looked-forward-to (or dreaded) gym/health class. Many students enjoyed the free time when they got to exercise and play games, but some didn't always like the health part too much. "I wish Coach Kraus would lighten up on the long quizzes and tests," said Mark Kitchens.

Yet sophomores took driver's education instead of the long health class. Many students found this to be a big step up from freshman health. "Driver's Ed. was fun; Coach Ripley taught us what we needed to know, and we had an O.K. time listening to his crazy jokes," said Jennifer Brindle. But not everyone had this same outlook, as Bobbi Decatur said, "Driver's Ed. was alright—I had it first period so it was kinda boring. But at least now I'll be able to drive soon!"

P.E., Health, and Driver's Ed. all being very different, were all alike in preparing a student for life ahead. P.E. and health helped students to learn about good physical condition while Driver's Ed. taught them the rules of the road, before they joined the madness of the real roads. Story by Nicole Sports provided experiences for students unlike any other. People who suffered together through long, grueling practices tended to grow closer together. Friendships and memories were formed that would prove to last for years to come. Ashley Sisson, a member of the tennis team, and Diedra Mullins, a member of the softball team, said, "I like the sense of family and being a part of a team. When times are toughest, that's when I teel closest to my teammates." Whether the memories consisted of triumphant victors or heartbreaking defeats, they were moments that would not be easily forgotten. "Sports has conted a fun struggle for the past four years. I've loved every minute of it" said Seth Bourne, a member of the varsity baseball team. Though the work could be difficult at times, those who participated felt it was worth the extra effort.

Others played sports to keep them busy during the after school hours. Cheerleader Sarah Hall stated that, "Cheerleading gives me something to do after school. I guess it helps to keep me out of puble, and is fun at the same time." Sports provided a fun outlet for students emergy. However, they were taken seriously by many athletes who thrived on the competition. It was this drive which resulted in many successful sports seasons. Story by Sara Philpott.

Tough Country Boys

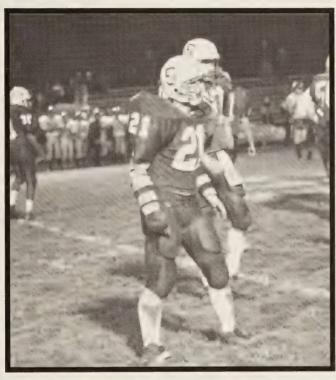

This year the mighty Stafford Indians came through with another great season. Unfortunately, Mother Nature tried to hold the Indians back by raining out several games, including Homecoming. Through the weather and other tough times these fighters barreled their way through the season.

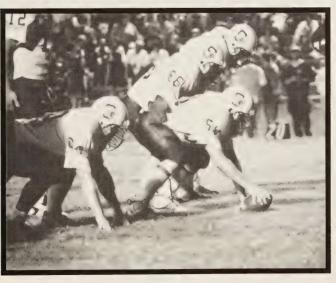

One team member, Ryan Clore commented, "It was a tough season and a lot of work, but it as all worth it in the end. We had a lot of fun out there getting dirty." Other team members also felt that the season was successful, despite the scores of the game. "We had determination in our eyes, but with the rough season we didn't get to show it," commented Chris Kraus.

One of their accomplishments this season was having a victory over James Monroe, last year's State Champions. To celebrate this shocking victory, the players and cheerleaders sang their way home from J.M.

These Tough Country Boys have left the stadium for now, but they will be back this August to battle out the heat to start another great season and end it with a BANG! Story by Amy

We want a Touchdown!

Freshmen and J.V. football look for victory

The freshmen and junior varsity football teams do not always get as much recognition as the varsity team, but they practice right along side of them in hopes that they will eventually play in their footsteps. Josh Clatterbuck, a freshmen football player said, "The practices were worth the playing time they got you." The freshmen and J.V. teams both began practicing during the summer and many conditioned in the previous year in preparation for the season ahead.

Playing junior varsity was an exciting step toward varsity for many players. Steven Love, a sophomore, was on the junior varsity team this year. "It's cool knowing that one day you will be on varsity," he commented. Eric Hudson said, "It's good practice for varsity, but you still want to win just as much, freshmen, J.V. or varsity!" The teams worked hard all season, practicing to achieve new heights. Recognition or not, they quietly won games and accomplished their own goals to make for a successful football season! Time to Relax Being in the marching band often proved to be rather exhausting especially for Garrett Green and his fellow drummers. The marching band practiced constantly throughout. Marchin' Indians

The Stafford High marching band struts its stuff

The marching band made many appearances throughout the year. Every Friday night before the home football games the band made its march from the parking lot at the school all the way to the to the bleachers at the stadium. Once there they sat in the far right side of the bleachers proudly playing as they watched their team play. After the long wait they stood up and gathered together for the half time show. The band marched onto the field and waited for the cue from the directors. One of the directors was Mr. Hite's right hand man Travis Cooper. Travis said, "Part of being a director is being the right hand man for Mr. Hite and you have to have experience and knowledge within the band." Throughout the year the band would focus on a single theme throughout the show. Along with the band the students who choose to work the flags were given their chance to perform. Another bonus to the halftime show were the amazing skills displayed by the twirlers.

Other than the halftime shows, the marching band was involved in many other activities. The band competed in many different competitions during the year. Some of these competitions were held in the area and some were farther away like Tidewater. Laura Jane Johnson said, "We have a lot of competitions during the year. We just had a competition at Tidewater I think it was, and we totally kicked butt. It was great." Students devoted much of their time to the band, flags or the twirlers with performances on the weekends and at games. The marching band also played during the pep rallies lending the own version of school spirit to the crowd. They practiced everyday after school and oftentimes spent a couple of hours or more working on their performances. Another big moment for the marching band is the opportunity to participate in the Fredericksburg Christmas Parade. Everyone who went to the parade got the chance to see the band in action. Passion To Play

District & Regional Champs

The girls' field hockey team turned out another great season. The girls were coached by Mrs. Pat Wheelbarger and Mrs. Liz Dixon. The girls began their practices in August and continued all the way through states. Crystal Carper was the Washington Post player of the year because of her competitive edge and love for the game. "I know we all complained about the hard practices and all, but in the end, it has made us the players we are, the friends we are, and a little bit of the people we are," said Crystal Carper.

The girls came back from states, in Virginia Beach, upset about their only defeat all season. "Nobody likes to lose, but we were just happy to have the opportunity to be there and make such good friends," said Becky Doyal. Allison Derr said, "It was sad coming home, knowing we had lost, but it was great to be there, everyone had a lot of fun staying in the hotel and missing school." "It was great to be part of a team that worked so hard and went so far," said Amanda Evans.

Going the Distance

Cross country makes their mark

The cross country team really goes the distance for Stafford High School... to say the least. Both the girls' and boys' teams had successful seasons. They practiced during the summer to prepare for the fall season, which began at the start of the school year. "It was my senior year on the team, so that made it more fun," said Robert Doyal. They could be seen running on those early summer mornings long before most of us had even opened an eye to the light of day. Their dedication, combined with endurance, conditioning and great physical shape were the keys to a satisfying meet.

"I worked really hard over the summer because I knew we had lot to live up to coming off of our state championship. Despite my involvement in various extracurricular activities, I'd say it was a pretty good season," Kevin Oulette said, as a way of summing up this year's season. Carl Cabaniss was also a contributing member of the team, returning for his third year on the cross country team. "The mornings are hard, it was sometimes just getting light when I was getting up, but some of my friends were on the team too, so that made it a little easier," Carl said. Cross country was a huge commitment for those who were up for the challenge, but for those who were, they were motivated and ready to run when the season got started. Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz.

Teams shoot up to par and serve up aces

With the beginning of school, came the start of the golf and tennis season. These two teams were extremely successful for the past few years and hope to continue the record. The weather put a damper on many matches and stretched the season in order to catch up.

The Golf team, after facing the loss of many top seniors, did an exceptional job and ended up 2nd in the district. Top players included P.J. Cox and Ross Duvall. Senior Adam Dowling commented, "We did a great job this year and had a lot of fun, even after the loss of such great players last year.'

The Tennis team made it all the way to states this year. After blowing through the district, placing first, without breaking a sweat, they came to Regionals. Placing 2nd there, they visited States and finally ended with 8th in the state of Virginia. Many top players will return and with the addition of the freshmen Krista Eck and Ashley Dameron the team hopes to go even farther next year. "I think with some more team practice, next year will be even better," Jenny Witter added.

Hard work, lots of practice, and teamwork helped to make a successful year for these teams. Close knit relationships and long, tiring practices allowed the players to excel as well as have fun. Story by Andi Bordick

Cheerleaders working hard to support our teams

Although cheerleaders were often taken for granted at basketball and football games, their presence helped to keep up the school spirit of the student body. Not only did they have to support the athletic teams, they also had their own practice every day. These practices consisted of running and long hours of drills, all beginning in the summer. "The best thing about cheerleading is the excitement of going to all the games to support our teams. It's fun when we are able to really get the crowd pumped up," said Nadya Lieb. Kristina Gates agreed, saying, "It's great to be out there to support all of the players, but it is also hard work."

The varsity cheerleading squad participated in District and Regional competitions, with hopes of qualifying for States. Last year the squad finished ninth in the State tournament, and they entered the contest with high hopes this year. "People don't realize how hard we work. We have to practice every day, just like any other sport. This year our goal is to place higher in States," said Kristi Dixon. This hard work and determination is what helped them to earn the respect of their fellow athletes. Story by Sara Philpott.

Young Spirit

Red Hot...

Starting high school with spirit, the freshmen cheerleaders began their season in hopes of cheering their players to victory. The squad was rather large this year, yet all the girls added pep and well appreciated spirit. "I found it was hard; we had to practice all summer," commented Ashley Payne. Many freshmen felt this way, yet they enjoyed the coaching of Mrs. Baumgartener and Mrs. Baggett and hoped to continue next year.

The J.V. squad did continue to enjoy the feeling of cheering on their sports. Linsay Diebold added, "It was hard work, but worth it when you could get the crowds pumped up and involved." Under the leadership of captains Amber Sullivan and Shannon Barnes, the squad had a lot of fun and added great encouragement to the football and basketball players. Some cheerleaders hoped to continue the cheering next year, entering the varsity squad to cheer on their Stafford Indians to victory. Story by Andi Bordick

Some rhythm and bustin' grooves

Throughout football and basketball season, the Indianettes worked hard to provide entertainment at halftime, although many people took for granted all the hard work and dedication that it took for a single routine. "Nobody really realizes how much work it takes to get everyone together and looking good as a whole. We have to practice for weeks to get a single routine all together," said Courtney Snellings.

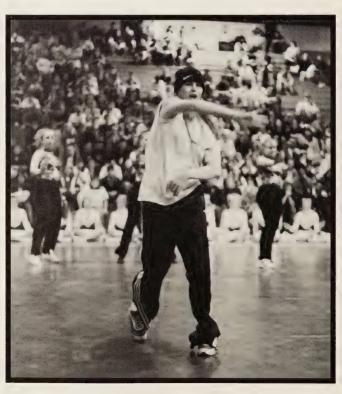

Though they may seem in unison, even drill team has its share of hardships. Jessica Sleppy commented, "We had some rough moments but we've always found a way to work through them." Melissa Cardagena agrees: "Sometimes it's really hard work but when we get through it, we're that much better." Yet one would never notice because once they've hit the floor, it's all about groovin' it.

During the year the Indianettes showed they've got the stuff. From Amber Sullivan playing Vanilla Ice to the seniors' dance to "Titanic," they've shared many memories together and have made many friendships. Carly Renninger concluded, "It's great, it's like having twenty sisters." Story by Nicole Brors

Success

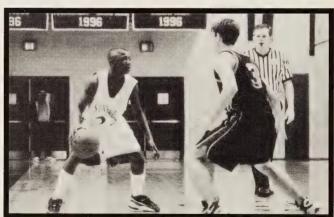

Stafford BB is the Best!

Hustling through the games, the Stafford Indian Basketball team finished with a great season. Although the team did not come out on top, this group of guys worked long and hard to get through the season.

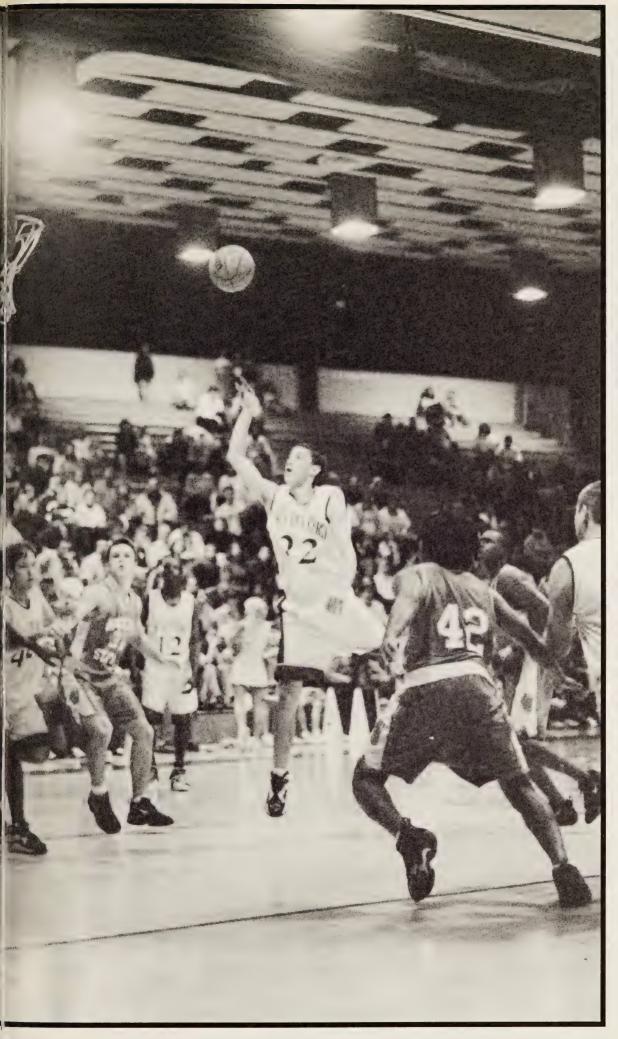

Practices usually were running drills, practicing shots, and playing a friendly game against each other. "Practice was one of the most important parts of the season," commented Ryan Clore. He went on to say, "It was the only thing that kept all of us in shape."

On the court, the stress level was high, and the intensity was building. "We came close to winning a lot of games, but it just didn't work," said Alex Doyal.

All in all, Willian Keiner, the captain of the team said "We had a great season, and we will be back." Story by Amy Cooper.

TAKE IT TO THE HOOP!

The Freshmen & J.V. boys basketball teams shoot for victory

Between the excitement of girls and boys varsity basketball, there were other teams leaving their mark behind the scenes. The boys J.V. and freshmen basketball teams led action-packed, shot-filled games as well. The boys prepared themselves for future play on varsity by practicing hard and giving 110 percent effort to their game. Dural Dawson, a leading scorer and a sophomore on the J.V. team said, "I liked playing J.V. 'cause I got a lot of playing time; I got a chance to work on my shooting and my game. We had a pretty good season; we all worked together pretty well during the games." Chris Kay, another key player for the J.V. team, also thought the team worked well, but credited the practices, as well as teamwork, to their success. "It wasn't just team work that got us a victory; we had to practice well too," Chris added.

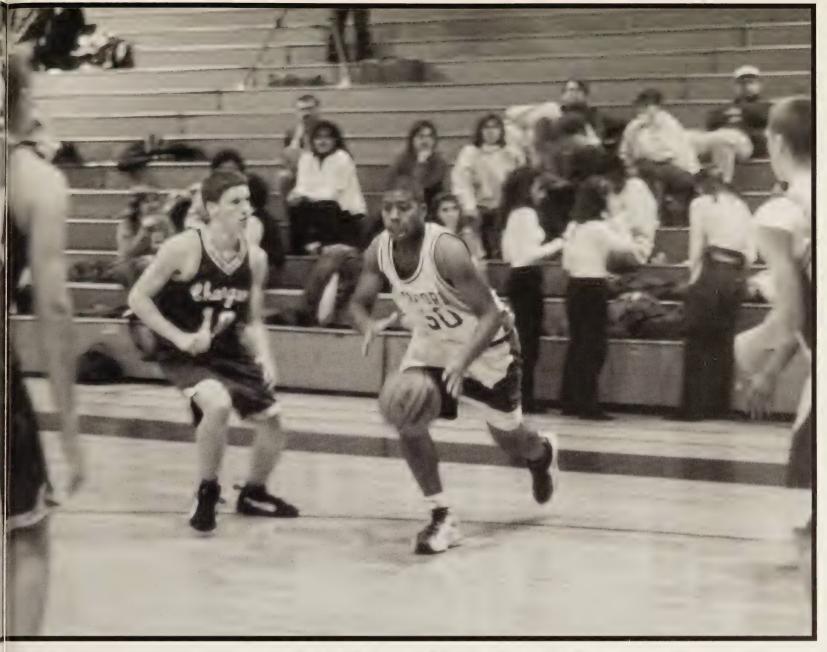

The freshmen team also played with a lot of skill and pulled off some great shooting and some important wins. Scott Wolf, a freshmen player, thought they had a good season overall. "We did all right; we had a lot of good times; we went out there and played and tried to have a good time while we were playing the game," Scott said. Whether you caught a freshmen or J.V. game, they played hard all season, putting their all into a successful record for the Indians. Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz.

Champs

The Lady Indians

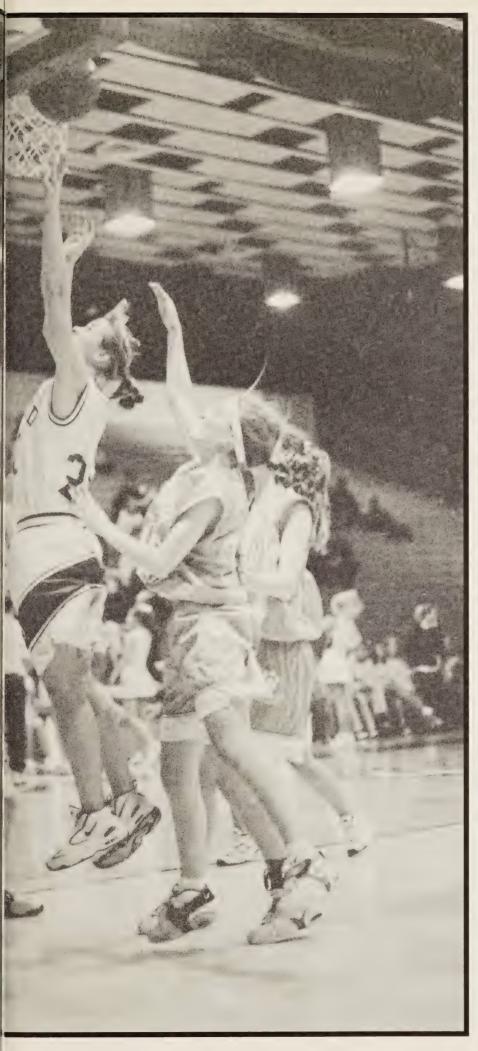

After a disappointing loss in last year's district tournament, some people said the girl's basketball team was headed downhill. This was not at all the case as the Lady Indians started off the season with high hopes to win the district tournament. They earned all the bragging rights they could this year, matching last year's performance and winning the district tournament. "This season has had its ups and downs, but I'm glad that we won the championship again. The practices weren't all that fun, but I guess the games made up for it," said Amy Cascio. By placing first place in the regular season the girls were able to gain a first round bye, and eventually won the tournament by defeating district rival Courtland. The girls also made it into the regional tournament and defeated Woodbridge before losing a hard fought game to Gar-field. The Lady Indians had a great season and lived up to all the goals and expectations set by Coach Rick Butler.

Everyday after school the girls team practiced and prepared for the upcoming games during the week. Hard work and much determination was needed to make it through the week. The girls started off every practice with a series of drills, and then went into other strategies that were devised by Coach Butler and assistant-coach Ms. Jackie Davis. "We go through the same routine everyday before practice and then we work on the other things that the scouts told us about the other teams," said Amy Butler. The players had to learn how to play against each team, which meant lots of practicing during the week and on the weekends. But after a season like they had, all the practicing and hard work was well worth the wait. Team captain Elizabeth Campbell said, "I had a great time this season; it was lots of fun, but the best thing all season was probably all the pre-game activities in the locker room." Story by Sean L. Farmer.

Nothing But Net After weeks and weeks of practice, Amy Cascio practices a few last free throws before one of their games. Coach Butler insisted on the players being able to do the basics before they could move on to other strategies in practice. Apparently it was a well devised strategy because it took the Lady Indians on to a district championship. Photo by Liz Kravetz.

Another great season

At the start of the girls junior varsity and freshmen basketball season the expectations were as high as ever. Both teams easily surpassed the their team goals and blew the competition away. "From the beginning tip to the last buzzer sound, this season was incredible," sophomore guard Amanda Summers said. Elizabeth Sowers, a forward for the freshmen team agreed with Amanda by saying, "It's fun and exciting to go out there and just play basketball against other girls; I think we really did well this season."

According to Ashely Roberson, teamwork was one of the main reasons the team had such great chemistry "It's great being part of a team and all; we really pushed each other." Kristen Ripley said, "The thrill of the game is great; it really kept us going." Both teams did great once again this year, each with a winning record and giving future teams an individual goal to match. Story by Oliver Goldman.

Muscle

A lean and mean wrestling team

The wrestlers began practicing for another grueling season. For some athletes practicing was not a problem, and most of these athletes were allowed to eat during the season. This was not the case for some of the wrestlers who were forced to maintain a certain weight thoughout the season. To add to this frustration some of the wrestlers were forced to wrestle off for their spot, which meant more weight loss for the loser and an extra meal for the winner. Senior Chad Martin said, "The fact that you have to maintain a certain weight isn't all that bad, it's when you have to go to practice when you're already run down; it's like you never get a break." All season long the wrestlers worked hard during practice and tried their best to be prepared

The team prepared all week to place well in both individual and team competition at the meets. Everyone did their best to get their teammates psyched up for the big matches. One of the biggest rivalries was between Omri Nassau and former Stafford Indian Nick Shahan. Talk began about this rivalry before the season began and continued right on through the season. Omri got the final bragging rights by defeating Niki in the regional tournament to become the regional champion. "The state tournament was pretty cool; I finished sixth out of sixteen people," said Omri Nassau. Each wrestler had his own way of preparing for a meet; each wrestler had their own style on the mat, but they all had one thing in common, they kicked some butt while they were out there. Several members of the team placed in the top two slots in districts earning themselves a spot in the regional fournament. Coleman Tyson said, "I was really psyched man; I got to wrestle at the 152 pound weight class and I'm going to be able to go to districts." Coleman placed second in the district tournament and finished fifth in regionals, just shy of making the state competition. Thomas Hagerty was disqualified from his match on a controversial biting call eliminating him from competition. Though the regional tournament was quite a challenge for some of the wrestlers, a few managed to earn themselves a slot in the state tournament. John-Mike Steinmetz, Omri Nassau, and Terrence Gallivan all made it to the state competition. This year was a learning experience for some of the younger wrestlers and the final time to show their skills for the seniors. Story by Sean L. Farmer

Wrestlin' SHS Style After coming out for warmup drills, the wrestlers each had their own way for getting psyched for the big meet. Of course, none of that mattered so far as people performed like Chris Hillary did while on the mat. Photo by Laura Crialer.

To Victory

Butterfly, breast stroke, freestyle, backstroke...

No matter the style or stroke, the swim team once again swam to victory. Having long enduring practices at the Y (not the pool on the 3rd floor of the school), the team worked hard and flew past all the local competition.

The boys' team's top seniors, such as Danny Pyle and Ryan Swierk helped to contribute to the teams winning completions. The boys' season went undefeated, also with help from top freshmen swimmers Ryan Chewning and Mark Crosnicker. Brother to Mark, Michael Crosnicker added, "Swimming on the team is fun, but when your younger brother is better than you, it kind of stinks." Captains Matt Dursa and Nick Powers led the team inspirationally through the winning season.

The Girls' team, led by captains Jessica Thomas and Emily Godfrey, only endured one loss of the season, but by a very close five points. Top swimmers like Christie Cleaver and Amanda Zawora contributed to the great season. "We had a great season and a lot of fun while doing it," Emily Godfrey commented.

The team had a great year, and gave few complaints. A common thought, said best by Danny Pyle "I hate having meets on Friday night; no one comes; you miss the basketball games, and it can be really boring." These complaents were ignored when the season proved to be a great one. Story by Andi Bordick

Flips with a Twist

Three-time Regional Champions

Being a young team, gymnastics had to work extra hard to pull together. "This year was a year of rebuilding for our team. We were composed of mostly freshmen and sophomores, yet everybody gave it their all and it turned out to be a success," said Kristy Noel.

This year Stafford was faced with some close competition by their rival Brooke Point. Though Stafford didn't claim district champion, they kept a positive outlook. Nicole Dauch explains, "We had a rough time through districts, but we knew what we needed to work on and we all pulled together to win regionals."

Competing one at a time was often the most stressful part of gymnastics. It is a team effort to win, but one also has to put forth their personal best to keep scores high. Annie Strickler commented, "Districts really stressed me out. But after it's all over, and we hear them announce us as first in the region, it really gave me a feeling of accomplishment." Story by Nicole Brors.

Fixing the boo-boos

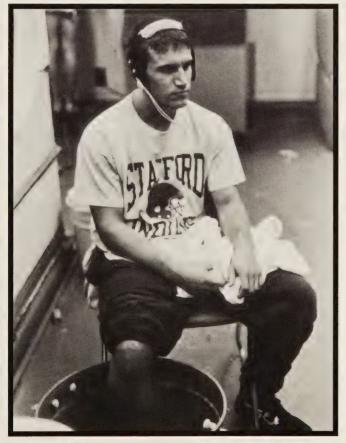

The ins and outs of being an athletic trainer

Have you ever wondered what shape athletes would be in if Stafford did not have athletic trainers? Believe it or not, most students take trainers for granted. Trainers are there for all the games; they fix up, wrap up, and ice up.

Trainers learn several different techniques throughout the year to help out the athletes. They learn how to teach athletes to prevent injuries, as well as how to take care of them. Another added bonus is getting the firsthand experience from taking care of different teams. Each trainer is assigned a team, and they must go and sit at the games in case of an injury.

"Being an athletic trainer is a lot of hard work and dedication, but it also is fun," commented Joanna Beard. Most athletic trainers felt this way. Most of the time, they did not like sitting through a rainy football game or a hot softball game, but they learned a lot and had fun doing it.

Track and Field

Sprinting through the misty sleet, shot-putting through fog and haze, pole vaulting to the sun... the track team made a commitment through the winter and spring. Winter track began warm but came to a shivering end. The team excelled, pushing many runners to states. A member of both seasons, Eddie Johnson commented, "I was glad I made it to states, with teammates Jason Trant, Ben Whitford and Carl Cabaniss." Eddie ran the 55 meter race while, Ben and Carl worked their stuff on the one mile race and Jason on the two mile race.

Spring track started with many people and hopeful qualifiers for main events. Sam Hall was a large asset to the team with her amazing shot put ability; she added, "when I step up to throw it is like the whole place goes silent and it is just me; I really concentrate and then things fall into place." Under the coaching ability of Coaches Ocheltree and Gorfida the team excels and hopes to do as well, if not better, than the winter season. Story by Andi Bordick.

The Soccer Guys

Boy's soccer prepared for a great season

Starting off with a positive outlook often helped the players to stay in the game. "Everybody feels pretty good about our season so far," stated Eric Wall. "Personally, I think we have good team this year." This idea was shared with many members of the team. "We have a lot of talent to work with this year," said Travis Price.

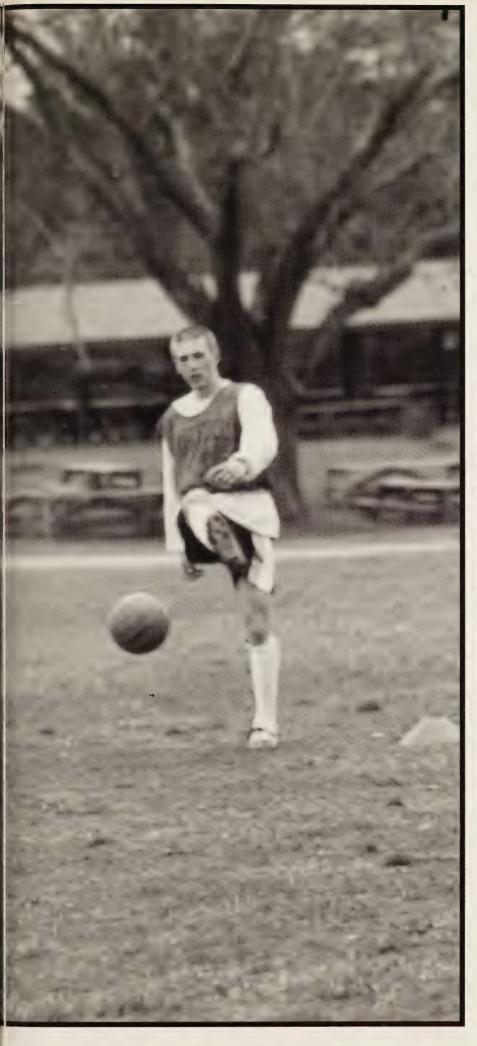

Not only did it take skill, but it also took a lot of endurance. "My legs are really sore from all the running we do," added Cory Harding after only the first week of practice. They could often be seen running to keep up their strength. They worked hard and had a respectable season. "I think we're going to do even better next year," said Travis Foss.

J.V. also had quite a learning experience. "I think we would do better if more people came to watch, but nobody really cares about J.V," said Hunt Blackburn. But no matter what the players thought, soccer tended to be the most popular spring sport events. Story by Nicole Brors.

Meeting Goals

Ahead of the Game

After tough and exhausting tryouts, the girls soccer team only had a tougher season ahead of them. The season started out with rainy weather, but hopefully the teams will make it through the season with mother nature on their side.

This year the varsity team was looking forward to a good season. "This year our team should be successful because we're all friends and working towards the same common goal," said Mickeia Robinson. Most teammates were looking forward to the games so they could prove themselves.

Not only the varsity, but the JV was also looking forward to a good season. Coach Liz Dixon commented, "This is one of the best J.V. teams that I have seen over the years. We have a lot of great freshmen and they all work well together.'

Whether these two teams went on to win or not, these girls were happy as long as they met their GOALS! Story by Amy

Into the Swing of it

Spring means baseball

The start of spring did not just mean warm weather and sun, it was also the time for spring sports, such as baseball, to get into action. The approach of March began conditioning and tryouts for the J.V. and varsity baseball teams. "We do some running and a lot of drills; it gets you going again after being inside all the time during winter," said Ryan Graham, a junior who played for the varsity team. His younger brother, Matt Graham, was on the J.V. baseball team. "It's pretty cool; the running isn't, but you get used to it and it isn't that bad," Matt added.

The team had many new additions, as well as a lot of returning players. As a junior and a member of the varsity team, Chris Shiflett played his third year. "It's more work than people think it is, we do some running and we go through different drills, playing different positions and things like that," Chris commented. Baseball was a great way to get back into shape after the cold days of winter. For many who played, it got spring off to a more exciting start and made the end of the school year go by just a little bit faster! Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz

It's Outta' Here

The softball team... just could, go, all, the, way...

The Girls Varsity Softball team returned several key players from last year's line-up and even managed to add a new touch. One of the latest additions to the softball team was new head coach Mrs. Pat Wheelbarger, who had high hopes and great expectations for her team. Deidra Mullins said, "Mrs. Wheelbarger was an awesome coach, she was so cool, and without her we probably wouldn't have had such a great season." The girls team went through about a week's worth of tryouts before Mrs. Wheelbarger had made her final decisions for the team. The keys to being a success on the field were being well prepared during the game. To accomplish this feat the girls practiced batting and other skills, and were put through every possible scenario so that they could perform efficiently during the game. Nicole Brors said, "This year was a lot of fun, and I'm just glad that I'll be able to come back for one more year with the team." Erika Havasy said, "I think this year was a really rewarding season; we did great and we had a great time." The girls had a great season, worked hard, and finished respectably in district competition.

The Junior Varsity squad also had a great season working hard to prepare for both games and a future in Stafford Indian Softball. The team improved both by lessons learned on and off the field, and by watching the Varsity squad. Many days were spent after school on the field in preparation for anything that the opposing teams could find to throw at them. Their season was a success and all the players looked forward to returning prepared for their upcoming season

When the spring starts there are many conversations around other sports, but not that many concerning the boy's tennis team. During the buzz around spring sports, tennis gets the least recognition, but that does not mean that it's not a hard sport. Most people think of it as just a hobby, but it's more than that," said tennis player Kevin Roberts. "People think of us as preps, but we're really not, except for Jeff Cooper, of course," said Jay Underwood. Many people have trouble understanding the game as a spectator, but once they play the game for the first time they can't stop. "This is my first year playing, but it is a great way to get exercise and have fun," commented Brett Lively. "It may look like an easy sport, but the practices are hard and the training is long," said Jeff Cooper. Even if they do not get the recognition and stardom that other sports players get the tennis team plays for one reason and one reason only, for the love of the game. Story by Oliver Goldman.

New Blood

The Lacrosse team works hard to surpass last season's record

Lacrosse was a new experience for many people, both spectators and players included. Unlike sports such as soccer and baseball, there were no intramural programs available to kids who wanted to start the sport early. Therefore, coaches had a tough job on their hands, trying to teach the game to new players while helping old ones to improve. Due to lack of knowledge about this activity, people tended to have mistaken impressions about the skill required to master the sport. "Lacrosse isn't just a sport in which a person can just buy gear and start playing competitively. It takes several years of practicing and developing before one is at his best. Even the best person on the team has a long way to go. Lacrosse is intense, but it is fun," said Chad Martin. Nate Thompson added, "Most people believe that lacrosse is a game where you just run around and beat people with sticks, and that is so wrong. Lacrosse takes skills and split-second decisions. The game is built on speed and grace. It takes a lot of teamwork and communication to build a good team." The players' and coaches' hard work helped to build a successful program at Stafford. ACTING UP

TO ACT OR NOT TO ACT

That is the question. For members of the drama club, the answer was easy. Members of the drama club spent many long hours preparing for just one play. Their hard work paid off in their fall production of The Complete Works of Shakespeare—Abridged. In this play, they did an overview of all of the works of Shakespeare... with a twist. From David Jett throwing up silly string all over the crowd, to Cramer Thompson's hysteria, it was a trip from the ever classic Shakespeare to a modern misinterpretation of hilarious mockery. It was an audience-oriented play that kept people wondering what would happen next. "It was weird seeing part of the cast come sit with us, but I liked it. It was funny and different," said audience member Kristy Noel.

Some members later moved on to compete in the Virginia High School League (VHSL) one act play competition with The Trial. In 1994 they got first in state in this competition. Last year (97) they competed in the Virginia Theater Association (VTA) competition and also made first. They then went on to compete in The Southeast Theater Conference Association (STCA) and received second. "It was extremely exciting but it was disappointing that we didn't win first place," said Dee Dee Bevan.

Being in plays and competing when the pressure is high can sometimes be stressful, but it does have its rewards. "Going to Miami for the STCA competition was great. We got to get out of school and go somewhere with nicer weather," said Drama Club member Nick Boeke. And besides, who knows? Maybe one day a fellow student may grow up to be a famous actor or actress. Hey, it could happen. Story by Nicole Brors

SINGING SENSATIONS

THE INS AND OUTS OF CHORUS

As you walk down the P.E. hallway, have you ever wondered where all that singing was coming from? Well, that's probably just one of the many sections of the Chorus we have here at Stafford. The Chorus Department is divided up into four different section, the Madrigals, Show Choir, Girls Ensemble, and Chorale.

Some people consider Chorus an "easy elective" where you won't have any homework, and you just sit around and sing. Wrong! Chorus student Erin Kerby stated, "Chorus is a lot of work, and a lot of practice, but in the end it all pays off." These Chorus groups usually give two big performances each year, once at Christmas, and once at the end of year in the Spring.

These chorus students, little known to Stafford, work all year round perfecting for each performance, making Stafford proud of every note they sung. Story by Amy Cooper.

STRAIGHT TO BUSINESS

GETTING INVOLVED WITH FBLA & DECA

Of course we hear it all the time... FBLA & DECA. Exactly what do all those letters mean? They stand for the Future Business Leaders of America and Distributive Education Clubs of America. Students pursuing anything from computers, to business, even fashion design and merchandising were free to join either the FBLA or DECA. The clubs provided students with a chance to learn more about the business world that most would be entering after high school or college. "DECA has given me a lot of good opportunities, especially through competition," said Jennie Tuscany, who has been active in DECA for most of her high school experience.

The clubs could also help students to apply for jobs, get jobs and most importantly, keep them. "The club gets you prepared for the real world," said Jackie Braja, a DECA member. Both clubs met often throughout the year and participated in various competitions. FBLA & DECA continually open doors for students aspiring toward business occupations. Story by Kristin

CLUBS FOR THE MIND

LOOKING INTO THE FUTURE, STUDENTS STILL HAVE FUN

Throughout the year students are given many different opportunities to display their creative side without getting in trouble for it. One such way of doing so was by participating in Forensics when you had the free time. Along with showing up for the competitions, students needed good artistic and vocal ability to complement their performance. Adrienne Brown said, "I really enjoy competing in both the speech and congress events. I love being the center of attention, and it's a perfect opportunity for that. It feels great when you know that you have done well." For some students it was not the drive for winning that made them compete; it was the simple pleasure of Forensics. Scott Ferrebee said, "If I win, I win. If I don't, oh well. It's just a fun thing to do." Not everything was fun and games because the competitions took up students' time on the weekends. Adrienne and Darragh Copley both agreed when they said, "The only thing we don't like is using up our whole Saturday to go sit in a cafeteria full of nerds at some random school."

Debate was a great way for the more opinionated students of SHS to get their emotions out. As opposed to the traditional belief that debate is just a bunch of people sitting around arguing, competitors actually had to learn something before they got down to the nitty gritty. Debates were based on a variety of topics such as morals, beliefs, current events, and facts. To win the competition students had to convince the judge and audience that their view was right.

The environmental club had quite an array of members during the year to keep up with their numerous projects. Students who enjoyed being outside and around nature found the environmental club extremely enjoyable. The members of this club were constantly at work during a Sunday afternoon football game at Grafton Elementary school Shaun Kerr was tackled into a trash can and Andy Rowdon immediately said, "Hey I'm in the Environmental Club you pick that up or I'll throw you down the hill." Miracles never cease. Throughout the year the club has many fundraisers and projects like river- clean ups and save the environment type projects. Story by Sean L. Farmer.

VICA STUDENTS PREPARE FOR TOMORROW

The Vocational Industrial Club of America, or VICA, could be found in the vocational hallway here at Stafford. "VICA is a club were men are men and you can get down and dirty," said Justin Harrison. Luke Lenzi had this to say about VICA, "It is competition for which we prepare for the first half of the year and have meetings to give us more information." To help raise money, VICA held their annual fruit sale, which, as always, was a big success and an easy way to help their funding. VICA included such classes as auto mechanics, cosmetology, drafting, and many more others. "Drafting is fun because not only did it help me get an easy grade, but it also helps me prepare for the future," said Matt Cribb. The material they learn in VICA will help them in the real world and better prepare them for the jobs of tomorrow. Story by Oliver Goldman.

Getting Technical Technology was constantly changing as the year went by. Students in TSA learned all about advancements in computers and technology. Josh Burgess works on a problem solving activity during a technology class. Photo by Darragh Copley.

TSA prepared students for real-life problem solving as well as their futures. Students did not need to be in a vocational class in order to join TSA. Anyone interested in technology in today's world could join the club. TSA activities include routine meetings, competitions and field trips. "It's a good opportunity to prepare you for a job in the future," said Greg Horton.

For students interested in the field of technology, TSA provided many advantages. The club did everything from geometrical problem solving to actual building projects. "Technology is a big field, so it covers a lot of different job choices," commented Coleman Tyson. "It's a good club to join if you're thinking about getting into technology." DISCOVERIES

LEARNING AFTER SCHOOL

Some students just can't get enough of certain classes during school hours. For these dedicated students there were academic clubs available such as the History and Science Clubs. These clubs gave students the chance to further their knowledge about these two subjects.

Eric Powell, the sponsor for the History Club, said, "This year should be good because we have a lot of new members that are enthusiastic about the club." Mel Biscoe was the president of the club and Cathy Adams the vice-president. Treasurer Casey Cooper said, "We do a lot of fun things for the History Club. This year we have cleaned up the cemetery outside the school stadium. We also have a field trip planned to the historic sites downtown."

The Science Club's popularity could partially be due to the interesting field trips they attend each year. The goal of the sponsors, Mike Pratte and Matt Schrader was to make sure that students with an interest in science would have an opportunity to explore new aspects of it. "Our vision for the Science Club this year is to give the student body an organization after school that incorporates fun and learning." This was the main purpose for joining clubs, to have a good time while experiencing new things. Story by Sara Philpott.

LENDING A HAND

COMMUNITY SERVICE FOR A GRADE

A new class offered to students, Students Serving Stafford, has been a great success. Rearranging itself from a former extracurricular activity to scholastic credit, it teaches and allows students to interact with the community in need. "I have done work with FAHASS [Fredericksburg Area HIV-AIDS Support Services], volunteered at the hospital, and done extra community things," commented Amy Cascio on what she has done this year. Other class participants act on important committees helping to teach professionals. Jill Strong works on a pregnancy board trying to deal with the issues of teen pregnancy. "It's really fascinating how clueless and ignorant some adults are towards teens and sex; if they didn't have sex, would there be teen pregnancy?" she added about her studies and service.

Another similar group is Interact. This club takes part in allowing the Stafford community to get along. Peer Mediation plays a large part in Interact; here students try to solve student conflict without a physical fight. Liz Braun, a member for many years, commented, "It is nice and comforting to help out people with their conflicts; also I feel better knowing I am not going to run into a fight in the hallway!"

The use of community service and just helping others out reflects a lot on teens who are often seen as self-centered and uninterested. These students help to make the county, people, and school a better place, as well as better educated about our student life. Story by Andi Bordick

FRENCH AND LATIN CLUBS

STUDENTS ENJOYED MANY ACTIVITIES OFFERED BY THEIR FOREIGN LANGUAGE CLUB

The 1997-98 school year was a big year for the French Club. They had many activities going on throughout the entire year. "We embarrass people on Valentine's Day with flowers and grams, bring needy children gifts for Christmas, and in the spring we plant a tree here at the school," said French Club member Katie Carter.

As for the Latin club, their main event is the Roman Banquet in spring. "We get to sit around and eat food in togas," said Christian Hilchey. Aimee Dudash added, "Yeah, and we're going to do a play... I think."

SPANISH & GERMAN CLUBS

COME JOIN THE FUN

Have you ever been siting in your Spanish or German class and wonder where the language originated and the different cultures it comes from? Well, all you have to do to find out is join the Spanish or German Club.

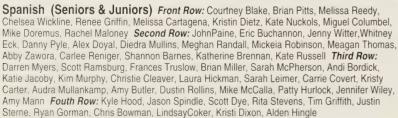

"Being a part of the club is fun, because you can learn and party at the same time," said Alex Doyal. This is just one of many students that have had fun taking trips to Carlos O' Kelly's and making paper mache pinatas. These are not the only activities the club participates in. The Spanish club is also involved in service projects. Once a year in December kids go to the homeless shelter and throw the kids there a party. The sponsor, Mrs. McClung, commented, "I enjoy meeting with the kids in an environment other than the classroom, and letting them meet other kids and students who share similar interests."

The German Club is another great club that is involved with the school and community. German was a difficult language, but students liked the challenge. "I had a lot of trouble with the language at first, but it turned out to be fun. Being a part of the German Club is a great experience to learn the history and background of German," said Laura Calloway.

WHAT AN HONOR

NHS AND NAHS

The National Honor Society and the National Art Honor Society provided great opportunities for students. The programs were targeted to students who were strong academically or artistically and academically inclined. The NHS required that underclassmen maintain a 3.7 grade point average and seniors were required to keep up a 3.5 grade point average. Aside from keeping their grades intact, they also took part in many activities and helped other students. "NHS is great for people who want to go to college 'cause you have to maintain good grades and it looks great on your record," said Bonnie Combs. One of the most beneficial activities was the tutoring they offered to other students throughout the year. NHS members offered to stay after to help other students who were having difficulties in a certain class or classes. This was one of many programs they offered.

certain class or classes. This was one of many programs they offered.

Rita Botts is a member of the National Art Honor Society, or NAHS. "It's only our second year. So far we've been doing a lot for the drama department; we've completed two backdrops for them and we also displayed artwork in the lobby during the play performances. Our main goal is to get art displayed in the community. We want people to see the kind of art high school students are doing, not just people within in the school, but people outside the school as well," commented Rita. NAHS focuses on strong art students with an extensive interest in art or an intention of pursuing art in the future. It was a good chance to be involved with art even outside of the art classes. Vote for Beyer As election week got into full swing the members of the Young Democrats really got geared up. Senior members of the club, Sarah Danzi and Katherine Kimbrell, show their support for their candidate. Election Time! As the preparations for the election began, the Young Democrats began to gather all the groupies around for the float competition. Ryan Gorman, Joey Katz, and Emily Godfrey share in one of the big moments for the Young Democrats, the float competition. Homecoming was a great way for all the members to get together and spend a little time bonding over those exciting political issues. Photo by Rita Stevens.

STUDENT LEADERS GET SET FOR ANOTHER YEAR

The year started off with a bang for the SCA of SHS. Our student council representatives attended a camp over the summer to catch up on the latest and greatest techniques of the SCA. They began the school year with a skit for the upcoming freshmen. This turned out to be a controversial performance that was much liked by the students but frowned upon by some staff members. The representatives were involved in activities like planning homecoming, working with the Salvation Army by ringing the bell to raise funds for needy families at Safeway, buying presents for needy families, and other similar activities. President Matt Donaldson said, "It's really fun being involved with so much and being able to have some influence on what goes on." Also, the vice president of the SCA Lisa Mendoza added, "I'm always having such a good time with what we are doing that the stress of everything doesn't really bother me."

The republicans and democrats of Stafford were constantly in action. All the students work hard to support their party and fulfill their political ethics. Members participated in activities such as rallies and showed a general support for the party. In case you were wondering why it seemed like these two clubs went through times when they weren't doing anything it was because they were inactive. At the end of the semester Katherine Kimbrell, a democratic supporter, said, "We participate in activities all throughout the year; we make a float for the homecoming game, participate in rallies, and just try to give as much support as possible to the other supporters in the area. Right now we are kind of inactive because there is no election to prepare for." Many students also joined up with the opposing republicans to support in similar activities. A member of the republican club, Todd Coates said, "Right now we really aren't doing anything; we are trying to get some events set up for the members to get their points and qualify for the field trip." The democrats also had field trips scheduled for later on in the year. Story by Sean L. Farmer.

Some Political Competition? For some students at SHS being in the club was a serious matter; for others it was an easy way to get a field trip. As Katherine Kimbrell fights for the spotlight, senior Mike Crosnicker just stands back and laughs. As serious as politics can be, everyone eventually could find a way to laugh a little about all the goings on. Photo by Laura Crigler.

HELPING OUT

HELPING THROUGHOUT THE COMMUNITY

The Key Club and Junior Civitans were not only some of the most popular clubs, but they were some of the busiest clubs. Both the Key Club and the Junior Civitans helped the community. "We did everything this year," exclaimed Key Club member Kate Godfrey. Perhaps Kate was talking about many of the things the club participated in this year including selling lollipops, writing to the elementary school kids, or working concessions at the basketball games. "It was a blast! I'm definitely doing this again next year," said Kyle Hood. "It's a great way to meet friends and help out the community," proclaimed Leslie Wall. During the holiday season the Key Club donated toys to the Hope House and held a Christmas dinner for the Head Start children. Both clubs this year were very active in helping the community and in serving the less fortunate. Story by Oliver Goldman.

HELPING OUT AROUND THE HOME AND SOCIETY

WHAT CHA FOT COOKIN

Everyone around school knew that there were clubs, butnot everyone knew what all the clubs did. All through the year students are friends with people in these clubs and hear about the clubs without knowing what they stand for or what they do. One of these clubs is FHA which stands for Future Homemakers of America. During the year FHA participated in many different activities like fund-raisers, competitions, and gathering goods for the needy. Patricia Gibson explained, "We have lots of different things that we do throughout the year. We have fund-raisers and competitions and all kinds of other stuff."

HERO and HOSA are two branches of the FHA that students are able to join. HERO stands for Home Economics Related Occupations. HOSA stands for Health Occupation Student Association. Both of these clubs are led by a sponsor Pat Allen, and work to prepare students for the future. These clubs have competitions at the local, state and national level. All the members get psyched to show off their skills and gain recognition. Story by Sean I. Farmer

Major Renovation Smiling and adding the last few pieces to her gingerbread house, Kasie McDaniels laughs and takes one last look at her creation. There were many projects for her class during the year. One of them was making the gingerbread houses during Christmas time. Photo by Derek Fults.

1, 2, 3, ... After a few minutes of this, Jason Rogers understands why math is so important to everyone in high school. Jason spent all period doing this little routine; much responsibility was required to do well in all of these classes. Many students participated in groups like HERO and HOSA to further enhance their skills. Photo by Laura Crigler.

Measured to Perfection For some, day after day of the same old thing might get boring, yet that was not the case for Jason Dengler who was just happy to be able to help out and get some work done. A major part of the class was being able to measure everything correctly without wasting any of the ingredients. Photo by Laura Crigler.

The Kitchen Crew Sometimes the thing needed most in the kitchen is many people, so Shari Holmes and Patric Johnson both work together to get all the jobs done. Many hands make light work, and that was proven to be true by the members of HOSA, HERO, and FHA on many occasions. Photo

The Florida Marlins became major league baseball's world champions in 1997, beating the Cleveland Indians in the World Series. Just five years ago, the Marlins tied the Indians in the ninth inning of the seventh game and went on to win it all in the eleventh inning with a score of 3-2. The Indians last won the Series in 1948.

The WNBA —Women's National Basketball Association— completed its inaugural season with the Houston Comets defeating the New York Liberty for the championship. And as the season came to a close, the WNBA announced that the eight-team league would grow to 10 teams in 1998. If it all works out, the Comets will jump to the Western Conference with Los Angeles, Phoenix, Sacramento, and Utah. The new teams, Detroit, and Washington D.C., will join the East with Charlotte, Cleveland, and New York.

In one of the most competitive games in Super Bowl history, John Elway and Terrell Davis led the Denver Broncos to a 31-24 upset of the Green Bay Packers in Super Bowl XXXII. The Broncos' first National Football League championship ended the American conference's 13 year losing streak in the Super Bowl.

How did a trio of adolescent boys from America's heartland manage to hit stardom in the music world? By being young, cute, blond and happy, the brothers Hanson became the newest kids on the pop charts. The band's infectious single "MMMBop" and their album "Middle of Nowhere" flooded the airwaves around the world. Issac (16), Taylor (14), and Zac (11), grew up in Tulsa, Oklahoma. But success didn't come overnight. The youngsters dealt with their share of rejection slips before they were discovered in 1996 at the Kansas State Fair.

The Verve Pipe is an incredible rock/pop/alternative band from East Lansing, Michigan. Their first single, "Photograph," received a lot of air time and became a fairly big hit. But its success cannot be compared to their latest single, "The FreshmEn." That song enjoyed time at Number One on the Billboard chart. The rest of the album, "Villains," contains an incredible mix of sounds. The Verve Pipe carved their own niche in the music world.

To Laura Calloway and the Senior Class of 1998

When you were born, you cried and the world rejoiced...

Live your life so that when you die, the world cries and you rejoice!

Despite comparisons with earlier groups like Menudo and New Kids on the Block, the Spice Girls have jumped into superstardom, grabbing the adoration that comes with overnight worldwide fame. With only one album to their credit, the five young women took the world by storm with their saucy antics and innumerable shouts of "Girl Power!" The five stars go by the names Geri, Mel B, Emma, Victoria, and Mel C. They got together in 1994 and cut their first single a year later. Their album "Spice" hit the charts in early 1997 and stayed all year.

Sheryl Crow grew up in a rural community in Missouri. When she was about six years old, she discovered she could play the piano by ear. That was all it took. Before too long, that musical talent, combined with a fascination with the music of artists as diverse as the Rolling Stones and Billie Holiday, led Sheryl to pursue her music full time. Piano and organ became her instruments of choice. She picked up the guitar during her years of playing in rock bands in high school. She began to develop her songwriting skills early on, drawing from every aspect of her life. Her latest album "Sheryl Crow" spent over a year on the charts.

The 11 songs on "This Fire," Paula Cole's top selling album, overflow with personal emotions and autobiographical details. As one critic said, "This Fire announces the arrival of a writer, singer, and musician of exceptional talent and power. It is filled with shockingly bold writing and singing that is gentle and whispering at one extreme of the pendulum and vicious at the other." Paula grew up in Rockport, a small Massachusetts town with a strong artistic influence.

"Tidal" is 10 timeless songs. This golden album by Fiona Apple spent more than a year on Billboard's bestselling chart. "My album is called "Tidal" because all this success has hit me like a tidal wave, but also because tidal refers to ebbing and flowing and that's really what life is, a constant ebb and flow. "Fiona cut a demo tape while she was in Los Angeles to spend time with her father and to finish high school. Back home in New York, one of the demos fell into the hands of a friend who baby-sat for a music industry executive. Fiona's friend gave the three-song demo to the executive who then played it for the producer Andrew Slater. The rest is history.

Erin,

From a "Terrible two" to a Teenager with a car... It's been great! We Love You, Mom & Dad

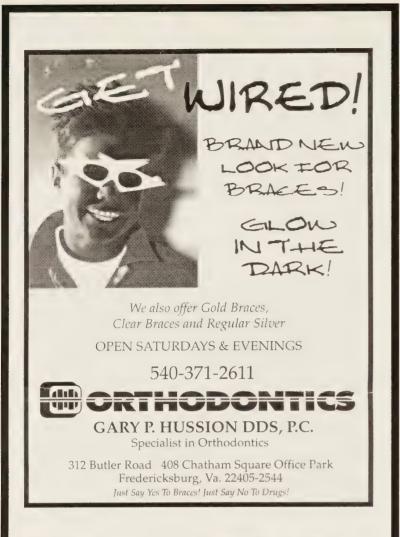

Jewel began writing songs when she was 17. Now, at 23, she's a star. Her first album, "Pieces of You," was released in 1995 and became an instant and prolonged hit, spending well over a year on the top charts. She was raised in Alaska where she began performing at the age of five. Her junior and senior years in high school were spent at the Interlochen Fine Arts Academy in Michigan. She then went to San Diego, which she now calls home. However, Jewel makes a point of maintaining a solid connection to her roots in Homer, Alaska—she carries a container of genuine Alaskan dirt wherever she travels.

Shawn Colvin is a great folk-pop songwriter. She sings immaculately conceived melodies and writes about tricky matters of the head and heart. Colvin's debut more than 10 years ago won her a Grammy with "Steady On." But her new single 'Sunny Came Home" is a bona fide hit. And her latest and best album, "A Few Small Repairs, " was a mega-seller and stayed on the charts for more than a year.

Garth Brooks' entrance into the world of country music wasn't as easy as it looked. After graduating from Oklahoma State with a degree in advertising he headed for Nashville to follow in the footsteps of his musical hero, George Strait. His first efforts met with total failure. About two years later, he took another shot at it, appearing in an amateur talent showcase as a last-minute replacement. That was about 10 years ago. His recent concert in Central Park in New York City attracted hundreds of thousands of fans.

The Dave Mathews Band has demonstrated over the course of three albums and several years of extensive touring that it has staying power in the record charts. Combining elements of rock, jazz, funk, folk, and world beat, the group is soulful and subtle in its harmonies and rhythms. Dave Mathews was born in Johannesburg, South Africa, and moved to Virginia about 10 years ago. He formed the group in 1990. They had intended to come up with a "propper" name for the group, but the name stuck before they had time to change it.

Phish has established an impressive reputation of tireless touring, dazzling improvisation and innovative rock and roll. And the Vermont-based quartet is the reigning "jam" bad in the land, boasting one of the most devoted followings in all of rock. The group was assembled at the University of Vermont by guitarists Trey Anastasio III and Jeff Holdsworth. One of their claims to fame was to have the ice cream mavens Ben & Jerry honor the group with its own flavor — Phish Food, a tantalizing combination of milkchocolate ice cream, caramel, marshmallow swirls and fish-shaped chocolate chips

Country star Tim McGraw, whose last two albums —"Not a Moment Too Soon" and "All I Want" - sold a combined 7 million copies, built his career on a heartbreak ballad. In the two years since "All I Want" hit the charts, McGraw became a millionaire, married country music's Faith Hill, had a daughter and gained respect as a producer. His fourth album, "Everywhere" reflects these changes in his life. The hit album chronicles a man in transition.

John Denver, whose optimistic songs catapulted him to fame during the 1970's, died instantly when his experimental plane crash into Monterey Bay in California on October 12,1997. The 53-year old singer had eight platinum records to his credit when his home-built plane crashed. "Rocky Mountain High" and "Sunshine on My Shoulder" were two of his trademark songs. "His music sprang from his feelings of love," said Hal Than, his longtime manager.

Mother Teresa was among the most well-known and highly respected women in the world in the later half of the twentieth century. In 1948 she founded a religious order of Roman Catholic nuns in Calcutta, India, that she called the Missionaries of Charity. Through this order, she dedicated her life to helping the poor, the sick, and the dying around the world, particularly those in India. Her selfless work with the needy brought her much acclaim and many awards, including the Nobel Peace Prize in 1979. She died at the age of 87 on September 5, 1997 of heart failure in at her convent in Calcutta

It seems like just yesterday we were two little girls without a worry in the world. Now we're all grown up and may go our separate ways into the world. We share so many memories, that like our friendship, will last forever.

1 Love You Gist Bobli

Britain and the world bade farewell to Diana, Princess of Wales, on a sparkling September morning with a grand tribute rich in pageantry. Since her death in a car crash in Paris a week before, the country had witnessed an astonishing outpouring of grief that forced a repentant monarchy to join in the kind of full celebration of Diana's life that the millions of people who flooded into London demanded. Her sons, William, 15, and Harry, 12, stood in attendance, joined by their father, Prince Charles, and her brother, Earl Spencer, as the body was taken into Westminister Abbey. Millions packed the city for the funeral of Diana. It was a crowd unmatched since the end of World War II. More than a million bouquets by official count were stacked outside the royal palaces.

President Bill Clinton was the first Democratic president in 60 years to be elected to a second term. A centrist New Democrat, he transformed his once beleaguered party. Under his presidency, the United States enjoyed the lowest rate of inflation since the early 1960's, and he was the first president in 17 years to submit a balanced budget to Congress. His vice president, Al Gore, was considered a very powerful vice president and was the president's closest adviser. The 49-year-old Gore was considered a favorite for the Democratic presidential nomination in the year 2000. However, a year after their re-election, both men were under close scrutiny for campaign finance violations.

The President's teenage daughter left home in September. Chelsea Clinton went off to college sine 3,000 miles from home., The 18-year old National Scholarship finalist accepted an offer from Stanford University in Palo Alto, California. Chelsea agonized between Stanford and Princeton right up until the weekend before she made her decision. Her Secret Service detail will try their best to make her stay as normal as possible.

The first component of the Mir space station was launched in 1986. It has made more than 60,000 trips around Earth. In 1994 the U.S. and Russia agreed to conduct joint missions aboard the station. A docking module was attached to Mir, allowing American space shuttles to link up with the Russian station. The main Mir Module—which provides living quarters for up to six people—has been orbiting for nearly 12 years. These joint U.S.- Russian missions are the first phase of a program to build an International Space Station. This station is scheduled to be in orbit by the year 2002.

The roving vehicle Sojourner, the first mobile explorer to land on another planet, landed on Mars in 1997 and gathered soil and rocks. Overcoming communications trouble and other setbacks, the Sojourner left the Mars Pathfinder landing craft. The robotic rover's six metal wheels rolled slowly down a ramp and came to a stop on the surface. The Sojourner, which was about the size of a microwave oven, began crawling around the surface of Mars, transmitting a flood of information to scientists back on Earth.

United States Secretary of State Madeline K. Albright was the most visible and active Secretary of State since Henry Kissinger. She was the highest ranking woman in the history of the U.S. government, and she was admired and respected by diplomat corps. Previously, she served as President Clinton's ambassador to the Untied Nations and in foreign policy advisory positions for former President Jimmy Carter. The on-going troubles in the Middle East kept the 60-year-old diplomat busy from the day she was sworn-in to the top job at the State Department.

Attorney General Janet Reno was the first woman attorney general of the United States. She was first nominated by President Clinton in 1993, and she was appointed again in 1997. A graduate of Harvard Law School, Ms. Reno, 59, focused on the prevention of crime among the youth of the country and stressed early intervention to keep children away from gangs, drugs, and violence. Late in 1997 she unveiled an advertising campaign urging the nation's youth to become involved in neighborhood crime prevention and community service.

Often called Israel's first Americanstyle politician, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu steadfastly rejected the land-for-peace bargain with the Palestinians, which was the backbone of 1993 Oslo peace accords. In the wake of the hard-line stance, there were dozens of deaths by terrorism throughout Israel. In the summer of 1997, two suicide bombings in Jerusalem, claimed by the militant Muslim group Hamas, drove Netanyahu to halt peace proceedings indefinitely. At the age of 48, he was the youngest Israeli prime minister ever.

The U.S. Senate Governmental Affairs Committee investigated alleged campaign fundraising abuses by Democrats in the 1996 Presidential campaign. The committee chairman was Sen. Fred Thompson, a Republican from Tennessee. The committee heard testimony from a wide variety of government officials and big-money political contributors. One of the key questions was the role of foreign money in politics—especially in the presidential campaign of President Bill Clinton and Vice President Al Gore. Political pressure was put on Attorney General Janet Reno to appoint an independent counsel to review whether the President of Vice President did anything illegal in raising money for the Democratic party.

Yasser Arafat was chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization and esident of the Palestinian National Authority. He was one of the key leaders in ring to maintain peace in the Middle East. His 1993 handshake with Yizhak abin promised mutual recognition between the Palestinians and the state of rael. Under the agreement, Arafat assumed leadership of Arabs within Israel's cupied territories. The 68-year-old leader played a very important role in keeping ace in the Middle East

Well, we made it thoughanother year. Great job everyone. This has been the best yearbook staff I have ever worked with in my seven years of producing yearbooks. I pushed them harder than I pushed them ever before and I think the book shows the hard work that was put in by all the staff members. I would like to thank the support and advice of my wife, Kathleen Hughes; my cohorts in the art department, Rachel Sigler and Holly Dittmarr, for putting up with all of the days I was stressing, and for trying to keep me sane and my blood pressure down; Aaron Austin Stressing, and for trying to keep the safe and my blood pressure down, Aaron Adstin for overseeing and helping out where needed; Sara Philpott for keeping the writers organized; Danielle King for pulling together all the portraits; Janean Neal and Kate Russell for advertising; Kim Murphy for organizing the sales and distribution of the book; Brian Koppel for all his extra help and work; Rita Stevens for all her hard work; Sean Farmer for all his wonderful stories; Dacia Goldman for her help with sports and clubs; Jeremy Conrad and Liz Kravetz for their wonderful photography; and Rita Botts for all her extra help with editing.

Thanks again to the entire staff. Mark Hughes / Advisor

Once again the Indian Legend has been completed. At times it seemed doubtful we would ever send out all of those deadlines, but of course, it has turned out beautifully. This yearbook has proved to be one of the best yearbooks (in my opinion) ever published by Stafford High School. I would like to thank everyone who was involved in making this yearbook what it is.

The photographers this year did a phenomenal job; not once did we have a shortage of pictures! I'd like to give a special thanks to Jeremy Conrad. The pictures he took and developed were of such high caliber I could hardly believe it was his first year as a photographer. Rita Stevens, Rita Botts, and Liz Kravetz were also hard working photographers with amazing skill. Thanks to all of the writers. Every one of you kept the pictures interesting with those witty (and sometimes un-publishable!) comments. Andi Bordick, Sean Farmer,

Oliver Goldman, Nicole Brors and Kristin Deitz worked hard all year - thanks guys! A great thanks goes to Sara Philpott, our hard working copy editor. Thanks for pouring over what seemed like millions of stories and captions. Thanks to Rita Botts for editing all of those proofs. All of our editors; Danielle King, Dacia Goldman, Rita Stevens and Kim Murphy, worked hard all year completing all of that thankless, behind-the-scenes work. Thanks to Frankie for being so good at making everyone believe he worked so hard!

Most of all I'd like to thank the man who was the backbone of this yearbook: Mark Hughes. He did a job that few could handle. Throughout it all he kept smiling and laughing and his cheerful personality was always present! Even though he did have an occasional "stress day," we couldn't have done it without him. Thanks for everything Hughes! Just think... Hughes, a daddy? Whew! What a thought!

We all worked hard all year and what a great yearbook we have to show for it. I am so proud of all of us and I am so proud to say that this is our yearbook! Great Job

Good Luck To Next Year's Staff! Aaron Austin / Editor-in-Chief

The Trial

The Drama Club's hard work paid off as they won first place in the Virginia High School League
Northwestregion's

1 act play competition.

The Drama Club once again passed everyone's expectations but their own as they became the district and regional champions in the high school half an hour play. "It was great, the chance for us drama people to participate in something other than sports," said Katie Carter. The play was about a man put on trial for not living his life to the fullest. "The long practices were hard and the rehearsals were difficult but it finally paid off in the end," exclaimed Joshua Grigg. The play started before the winter break and had a total of 19 actors who worked hard everyday after school for about two months. In the end the club once again raised the standard for which all future plays to be held to. Story by Oliver Goldman.

Why can't she just be quiet for once!? Morgan Baker tries to think about something for a minute, but Kramer Thompson yells interrupts his thought process. Actors had to keep their train of thought even while other actors were screaming at the top of their lungs. Photo by Liz Kravetz.

Where did you get a tie like that? Lead actor Morgan Baker looks a little distressed while getting an earful from Scott Ramsburg. It was key to have body language while on stage to tell the audience how one feels without saying a word.

What was the best part of dressing up as a girl?

"I really got in touch with my feminine side, it's a nice side. It was fun, but that make-up was hard to get off, and I still have nail polish on."

Even before the night started there was a sense of something feminine about all the men. Giving all the ladies introductions was John Agnew, master of ceremony who got a lot of laughs out of the crowd. What else got laughs were all the senior guys pretending they were girls. This long-held tradition brought people from far and wide to see such a sight. The contestants included those such as Miss Ida Lookin' Beautiful (Mike Crosnicker), Miss Lady N. Redd (Adam Dowling- winner of the ever versatile shoes), Miss Dee Meanor (Chris Kraus) and Miss Nurse Inspecta Rump (Billy Hayes). What has been recalled as one of the funniest points of the evening was when Danny Pyle (Miss Shirley Natso Flatley), was joined by John Agnew in his role as Lord of the Dance, while Danny danced as an Irish Riverdancer. Perhaps the loveliest lady of all was Coleman Tyson (Miss Wanda B.

Necked). He came out as the winner and got much approval from the other contestants with pinches and kisses from all. Second runner up was Miss Anita President (J.W. Boutchard), maybe even more controversial then the evening itself. Miss Congeniality of the 1998 Miss Googa Mooga Beauty Pageant was Chris Weimer (Miss Dutchess of Discipline). Overall the night was a complete success and a lot of fun for everyone. Story by Oliver Goldman and Carin Stoelker.

Most will not remember their high school career as one defining moment, but rather a series of smaller events that created the whole. These memories were made up not of the words that were spoken, but of the laughs, the smiles, and the tears that were shared between friends; a scrapbook of smiles that would be treasured forever. As the graduation day grew near, many students found themselves reminiscing about their previous years. "Remember the time when we..." started many conversations among seniors. These times could shape a student's life years to come.

Many students took their time in high school for granted until it was over. "For as much as we complain about it, I'll never forget Stafford High School for the friends I've made over the years," said Ryan Gorman. Others had different events which they view as their best memories of high school. Jeremy Conrad said, "Senior year was a fluff schedule. I spent four periods a day in the art room with Hughes and Sigler. It doesn't get much better than that!" Both art and photojournalism students alike were familiar with the crazy things which take place in the art room.

Sports also created many memories, both for the participants and the spectators. As students and parents watched, field hockey claimed the district and regional titles, boys' and girls' cross country won the district title and, girls' tennis won the districts during the fall season. During the winter the girls' basketball triumphed in both the district and regional tournaments, swimming claimed the district title, and gymnastics won the regional meet. The victories and the defeats the athletes experienced helped them later in life.

The students at Stafford realized that to make it through high school they had to have a positive outlook. "Life is made up of numerous experiences that are both positive and negative. However, in each experience, if you are aware of where you are within it, and learn from it, then you've made it positive somehow. That is the way I will remember Stafford, as a positive life experience," said Mary Smart. Story by Sara Philpott.
